Citizens demand careful Riverside redevelopment

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON
Staff Writer

City heavyweight corporations and institutions remain determined to revitalize the old Riverside Amusement Park area with new houses and townhomes. Equally as determined are those opposed to this project, which has fueled a longtime controversy.

Riverside Partners LLC, a limited liability corporation representing the United Northwest Area Development Corporation, Methodist Hospital and Citizens Gas & Coke Utility, filed a petition with the City of Indianapolis on Sept. 1 for a zoning amendment, according to information received from Citizens Gas. The petition asks for rezoning to allow development of a 167-unit housing project on 19 acres along Riverside Parkway East, north of 30th Street on the city's northwest side.

"For the last year or two, Citizens Gas has been looking to get more actively involved in economic redevelopment initiatives throughout the service territory (Marion County)," said Dan O'Brien, public affairs coordinator for the utility company. "We feel the greatest potential for economic redevelopment exists in Center Township."

According to O'Brien, Citizens Gas already has substantial investments, including pipes and mains, in the area. The proposed housing will benefit not only the company, but all of its customers, he said.

"There are many boarded up houses, vacant lots and closed-down businesses," O'Brien pointed out. "We can help to stimulate growth and revitalization. We can increase gas revenues and reduce individual customer cost. But, if we remain stagnant, it will be harder to continue to hold down cost.

"Citizens Gas is a public charitable trust, a nonprofit entity. Our job is not to maximize profits for shareholders because we don't have any (shareholders). We're here to minimize cost for our customers. Our goal is to provide dependable, safe and reliable gas service at the lowest possible cost."

Clark Kahlo, a resident in the Broad Ripple area, says his objection to the project is limited, but warranted.

"I have an objection to a portion of it," Kahlo said. "It's only a portion, and it's a very important distinction to make. Only the portion that involves locating some of the dwelling units on the banks of White River is what I object to. White River is a very special place that deserves protection from the entire community.

"And, although I live in Broad Ripple, I use that section of the river to canoe. We don't have mountains or highly scenic areas that are used for recreation. That's why we need to preserve what we do have."

According to Kahlo, the Indianapolis Greenway Plan was developed by the White River

Affirmative action may not be dead

By STEPHEN B. JOHNSON
Staff Writer

While the status of affirmative action and its existence have been under attack since the change in political power, many leaders have attempted to develop a game plan to help keep the concept intact for future generations.

Blandina Cardenas Ramirez, who served two terms on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, spoke on the issue of affirmative action at "The Status of Affirmative Action: Implication for the '90s and Beyond." Ramirez also heard from concerned students during the forum held Tuesday on the campus of Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis.

"You must know the facts and what you are up against before you can know how to deal with them," said Ramirez. "I support affirmative action and I will always be a supporter of affirmative action. By no means is affirmative action an ends to a means or a Holy Grail. It is a necessity for this particular moment."

Ramirez is an associate professor of educational leadership and administration at the University of Texas at San Antonio and, until recently, she was director of the Southwest Center on Values, Achievement and Community in Education at the Lyndon Baines Johnson School of Education.

A few weeks ago marked the 40,000th house built by Habitat for Humanity International.

The nonprofit organization has created a platform by which families, who otherwise would not have an opportunity to become homeowners, exercise this privilege.

Businesses, corporations, churches, general contractors and private individuals give generously to allow this type of endeavor to occur.

I will never forget the morning of Sept. 8. I got off the bus at 38th Street and Winthrop Avenue at 7:30 a.m. and began walking toward a construction zone. From the 3900 (NNPA) — Burrell Haselrig Jr., chairman of the Exploratory Draft Colin Powell for President Committee, confessed he has never met the nation's former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Yet, he is convinced that the retired Army general is running for the Republican nomination for president.

"But he just can't say it," Haselrig explained to this reporter in an exclusive interview. "And we can't ever meet until he officially decides (to run)."

This, of course, could be more sooner than later.

Powell has begun a 22-city tour to promote his forthcoming autobiography, "My American Journey" and to gauge the pulse of the nation on such topics as affirmative action, the deficit, inner-city violence, the war in Bosnia, and presumably his chances of obtaining the presidency of the United States.

Powell is shaking up the political establishment by being there. Two reasons seem to give a Powell presidential run a following, even though his political aspirations are heretofore unofficial.

One reason is that loyalty to the two-party system is waning and, according to U.S. News and World Report, because of that dilemma, "Powell's stature is rising like a

John Nelson Nelson to leave Indy, IPHA

John Nelson, executive director of the Indianapolis Public Housing Agency, will resign his post effective Saturday, Sept. 30 to take the position of deputy executive director of the Chicago Housing Authority.

Nelson leaves after two years with the IPHA.

"Chicago has major troubled housing, and after being there at HUD for a short period of time, I decided those problems could not be solved on a short-term basis," Nelson said. "I truly have mixed emotions about leaving Indianapolis because I really love this city. The people are friendly and it's a nice atmosphere. But, I feel my expertise is needed in Chicago."

Ruby Dee Dee to speak at Children's Museum

Award-winning actress, writer and storyteller Ruby Dee will be at The Children's Museum 6:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 4 in Lilly Theater.

Dee will celebrate the art of storytelling and share the importance of stories as she reads from her works. Directly following the presentation, there will be a special reception and book signing on Level 4 in "Life Stories."

Presented by The Children's Museum and Young Audiences of Indiana, "An Evening with Ruby Dee" is considered a "must see" for the entire family and is part of Young Audiences' Family Festival of the Arts Series.

For more information, call 921-4000.

By the way, a 1940s-style USO Dance at The Children's Museum will be held from 7 p.m. to 10:30 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 30.

Elections Give NAACP A Chance To become Viable... once again

The Indianapolis community has been without a fully functioning branch of the NAACP for months if not years. In recent times the focus of this local branch has been reduced to the concerns about how the branch has been administered. Civil rights issues and other relevant matters have all but disappeared from the agenda of the NAACP.

Instead all we have seen is continuing controversy concerning the role of Dr. A.D. Pinckney. This week Pinckney sent out a postcard to members alleging that his opponent, in this week's election, attorney Rod Bohannon is trying to perpetrate fraud.

As far as we can determine this charge is absurd. In the statement, Pinckney makes vague references to rules which apparently are known only to him concerning the prohibitions on the activities of Legal Services Organization employees.

It appears that Pinckney is making a confused reference to the rules which govern the activities of most not-for-profit corporations. In fact, the NAACP operates under the same regulations that Pinckney is trying to use as an attempt to discredit his opponent. The calling of Bohannon's candidacy a fraud makes no sense whatsoever.

This response to a legitimate challenger in a legitimate election is symptomatic of the problems the local NAACP chapter has had. In short, the mission of the organization has been sacrificed during a prolonged pointless struggle by Pinckney to retain the presidency of the organization at all costs.

Well the cost has been the total emasculation of the local office. If there have been issues to address, the NAACP has not been able to address them. If someone has needed the help of the organization, it has not been available for them. In short the NAACP has accomplished little during recent years.

The organization has a noble past and has been a blessing to our community. But the NAACP will have no future in our community if things continue in the current fashion.

In the past Pinckney has provided solid leadership for the NAACP. Unfortunately those days are gone. Currently Pinckney has consistently called everyone who disagrees with him or who opposes him some kind of name.

He's attempted to label his opponent as a fraud. He has refused to be interviewed by this newspaper and has called us "the right wing press." We've been called many things by many people but no one has ever confused us with the right wing of anything. We consider ourselves the "common sense wing" of the press.

Just last week Pinckney refused to give us an interview and instead gave us a copy of something called "Dr. Pinckney's NAACP News." It was filled with allegations and name calling. It cited a list of his enemies and named people who have long sense given up on expecting anything from the local NAACP. Most of the people cited had not had anything to do with Pinckney or the NAACP for several years. It would be funny if it were not so sad to see a good man lose sight of the fact that the NAACP does not belong to him.

It is not, nor has it ever been the property of any one individual. It belongs to us all. It's about time we took it back.

If you are a member you should vote. We think it would be wise to vote for a leader who will at least talk to the folks who publish the oldest African-American publication in the state of Indiana.

We have never had any reason to be unfair to the NAACP. Pinckney is simply wrong about The Indianapolis Recorder and he is wrong for the NAACP.

Our development essential to our future

We must be obsessed with our development, individually and as a people. I'm talking here about acquiring the competencies and building the capital base so that Black folk are respected players in the main economic game, not spectators in the bleachers.

This requires that we cross a bridge in our thinking.

We have no choice but to cross it because the rules for surviving and thriving in our society are changing fundamentally.

The most basic rule is that if an individual, an institution, an enterprise or a people doesn't have something of value to put on the table, they simply won't be at the table in the 21st century.

There are no shortcuts to the mainstream.

As effective as demonstrations and marches are, we must also do the meticulous, unexotic, day-in-day-out work of preparing ourselves to swim with the swift and turbulent currents of the mainstream.

That's why we must be obsessed with development of ourselves, our children, our institutions and our businesses.

We must cast aside any contentment with dependence, at one extreme, and any inclination toward excess consumption at the other.

The time has come, my fellow African Americans, for investment and development to become the guiding ethos of our existence.

It's essential for our children's sake as well as our own. But now you may be wondering exactly what this means.

An obsession with development means we must grow and support our businesses so that they create even more jobs and wealth.

It means our children must be reared to understand what business is all about so that entrepreneurship becomes instinctive.

We need thousands more entrepreneurs to follow in the footsteps of those daring visionary folks who have ventured out on their own over the years.

It means we must support institutions that have been vital to our survival and success.

Our sororities and fraternal orders. Our churches and community organizations. The NAACP and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. The Children's Defense Fund.

And, I list us last only out of good taste, our vibrant and indispensable

Urban League movement that has served us so very well.

It means using all the economic muscle we possess to advance our interests with those who covet our purchasing power.

African Americans represent a $400 billion market, which is growing faster than those of other groups.

We should leverage that to our advantage.

This is why the National Urban League pulled its 1996 national conference in Los Angeles.

We want to transmit a clear signal to California's tourism industry, probably the second or third largest industry in the state, that its governor's opposition to

To Be Equal

By HUGH B. PRICE

affirmative action, and thus his indifference to the inclusion of women and minorities in the California mainstream, is simply unacceptable.

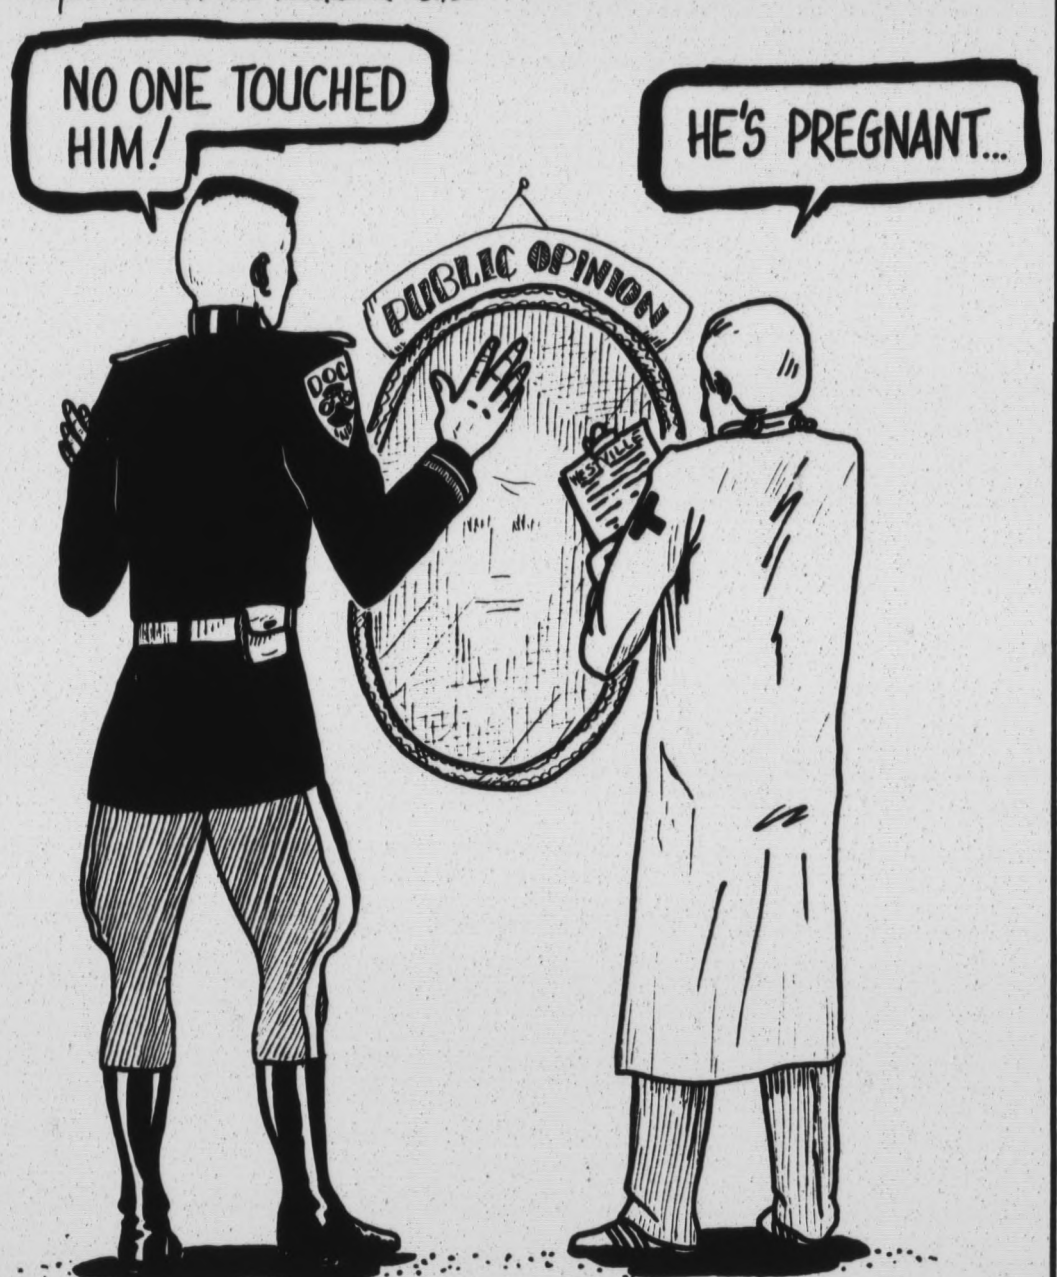

In other words, we of the Urban League not only bark; we bite.

I'm proud that we were the first national organization to step up to the plate and pull its conference from California.

I'm equally proud that our national trustees, our affiliates all across the country and especially our California affiliates have stood strong with us.

Using our economic muscle means giving where we can, as well as withholding when we must.

Choice, limits on choice forever debatable

It's hard to talk about. It brings about great emotion. There is little or no agreement on it in the African-American community or any other community, for that matter.

It's the question of whether a woman should have the right to choose — a woman's right to choose not to have a baby.

The fact of the matter is that many Americans do not believe in abortion for themselves. You might not know it by reading the papers or watching the evening news, but most Americans believe that a woman must have the right to choose for herself and that neither government nor family, neither the neighbors nor the church, have the right to interfere in that woman's decision. Most Americans believe that decision must be between that woman and her God.

Extremists in this emotional debate have already killed, have already maimed and threatened. Violence is a part of this debate all over the country. But no place has experienced more violence than Pensacola, Fla.

So it was in Pensacola last week that the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights held its national meeting of religious women and men who believe that every woman must be free to make decisions about when to have children, according to her own conscience and her own religious beliefs, not those imposed by others.

They met constantly under the protective eye of the police. They met knowing that they were in a

Rights
Journal

By BERNICE

hostile place. But they met to bring their support to the small group of people in Pensacola dedicated to providing comprehensive reproductive health services for women in that city, including abortion services.

But the attempts to limit choices of women, especially to limit the choices of poor women, are not confined to reproductive health issues. While conservatives would limit the right of a woman to choose about abortion on the one hand, on the other hand conservatives in Congress included provisions in the welfare reform bills to cut off additional funds if a woman has additional children.

Still another proposed cut would affect mothers' choices about child care. The original Republican bills eliminated the child care program funds for poor mothers, thus forcing them to choose either leaving their children home alone or with substandard and dangerous child care. The new Medicaid provisions may well take away poor mothers' choices about whether they can afford to take sick children to the doctor.

In still another attempt to limit choices, Congress has cut jobs training programs and poor people will find it difficult to locate the very programs which they need to get off of welfare.

Limiting choices of poor women seems to be the theme of many people in power, right now. It's pretty frightening.

Hey brother, we have to get something straight

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON

Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me. You kill my dog, I'll kill your cat. Turn the other cheek. Let's talk about it.

Those are all practices of yesterday, long forgotten today.

What is even more disturbing is that we neither forgive nor forget any wrongdoing, no matter how slight or severe.

Are we too proud, too ashamed, too low or too ignorant to know the difference?

Instead, we resort to killing our brothers and sisters, proclaiming to the world that we are most knowledgeable about weapons, but not about peace, love and unity.

Many of us blame the white man for keeping us down. Not true, in most cases.

Reality is that we are our own worst enemy. Rather than seeking honest employment, whether it be at a McDonald's or the White House, we rob, steal and sell drugs to our children, robbing them of the opportunity to become respectable adults. Then we proudly say: "Hey, look at me, man. I've got plenty money, driving a bad set of wheels, wearing the best clothes and shiny gold jewelry money can buy, and I did what I had to do to get it."

It does not matter if people were stepped on or even killed along the way. The end results are important. And, it's scary to think that a human life is of no more value than that. Often, it's our brother who is the victim, and I mean that literally.

Further, we are so ready to protest when a white police officer allegedly assaults or kills one of us. But, when we murder each other for trying to preserve the lives of our children and protect them from drugs, and maintain a safe place to live, silence is golden. Not a mumbling word can be heard.

A few days ago, an unsung hero was buried. There was no 21-gun salute, firing of a cannon or flags at half-mast. Before he was even put into the ground, he was labeled a vigilante because he stood up for what he believed in. Because Richard Sholar waged a one-man war with drug dealers in his neighborhood and lost, were his efforts, his very life, in vain? Are we singing his praises? Well, if we are, we're singing low.

Those of us who usually remain silent now have the opportunity to be heard. On Oct. 16, Black men from all over the country will descend on Washington, D.C. for the Million Man March. Organizers are asking that African Americans everywhere stay home from work and school to show unity in our race. They're asking that, for this one day, we all come together to prove that we are worthy of the rights afforded white Americans: equal opportunity employment, fair housing, job promotions, justice in the legal system, and the right to be treated with dignity and respect. No man is an island, but united we can stand tall as a nation.

But, it should be remembered that respect and dignity is a two-way street. To earn them, you must first extend them to others. Age does not constitute maturity and wisdom. It's what is inside that counts.

War on prenatal children continues

The fiftieth anniversaries of the atomic bombings have prompted debates about the ethics of warfare. Meanwhile, America's war on prenatal children has raged on unabated, routinely trashing every principle.

It has consisted exclusively of literally surgical first strikes against the totally innocent and helpless, intended to preempt the recognition and protections normally accorded at birth. Rather than honor the immunity of noncombatants, it has deliberately targeted them.

It has employed poisonous weapons, combatants. It has deliberately targeted them. It has employed poisonous weapons, refusal of quarters and live dismemberment of the unarmed target population, even subjecting them to experimentation, in contravention of the laws of war and all international standards for the treatment of prisoners.

It has violated "Just War" principals, including just cause, last resort, proportionality and competent authority by placing the decision for a death-dealing act, grotesquely disproportionate to the ends usually sought in the hands of the frequently ill-informed, distraught and underage.

It's rationalization on the basis of so-called hard cases has reduced the vast majority of those slaughtered to collateral damage at rates that would be morally horrendous, if practiced by the military.

What is it about unborn babies that suspends every ethical consideration? Is it the lack of any non-violent alternative for retaining control that justifies all manner of barbarism?

Or is that once the mental process of devaluing the lives of others, born or unborn, has gone far enough, they cease to exist in our minds as human beings such that anything can be done to them?

What have we become that we avert our eyes as nearly one in every three of our children is destroyed? Is this imbalance of power so much to be feared?

Why has the propaganda campaign been so effective that many now think and speak in the euphemisms ("pro-choice," "pregnancy termination," "reproductive freedom," etc.) and oxymorons ("safe abortion rights") of the language of denial?

How much more violence to life, truth, language, values, law, government, medicine, ethics and principals of human rights can our society withstand?

But conscience and nature are not easily overcome. Like the flyers who delivered the bombs, the women who have delivered their unborn babies to the killing centers have suffered unforeseen fallout, experiencing a range of emotional and physical problems from guilt and depression to sterility and breast cancer.

Yet the war planners continue to resist providing even the most basic safeguards — such as information about human development, life-affirming alternatives and potential hazards — rightly fearful that piercing their veil of ignorance will render their proxies unwilling to continue the carnage.

Get involved in the NAACP

Editor's Note: This is an open letter to Executive Committee members of the Greater Indianapolis Branch of the NAACP.

Now, more than ever, the Indianapolis Branch of the NAACP needs your help ... the reputation and the viability of the branch is at stake!

When you and I assumed stewardship of this branch by becoming members of the Executive Committee, we also acquired the fiduciary responsibilities of managing the affairs and assets of the branch, ensuring vitality of the membership and maintaining the respected and powerful position and reputation of the branch.

The Sept. 30 special election of officers and executive committee members is generating much conversation, interest, as well as skepticism from the membership, the African American and the community at large. While the election of leadership is important, it is the actual number of membership votes cast that will have the most consequences as to the future of our branch. A low turn out will give credence to the naysayers as to branch — and as to the NAACP in general — relevancy as a civil rights and advocacy organization. A large turn out will, on the other hand, reflect not only an interest in maintaining an advocacy organization, but will also demonstrate the relevancy stature and respectability of the branch.

Although I am a candidate for the office of president, whether I am elected or not, it is my concern for the future state of the branch that causes me to seek your help in ensuring that the position, respectability and power of our branch is not dissipated because of apathy.

As executive committee members, we need to work collectively and individually to ensure that we have a large voter turn out. I thank you for the time and energy toward this most important effort. Now, more than ever, let's make this happen.

balloon riding the hot air over Washington."

The second is because the nation is, the article continued, "starving for leadership and Powell oozes with leadership qualities." In the words of George Hammel, a white, retired Army command sergeant major from Columbus, Ga.: "You know, I hope Powell gets elected president. He's the only one I know who could bring this country together. Hell, even the rednecks would vote for him."

In a recent U.S. News national poll, Powell's approval ratings have climbed steadily from 62 percent to 71 percent of registered voters, while his disapproval ratings have fallen from 11 percent to slightly less than 5 percent.

And although he has never run for public office, the polls also say that 50 percent of the Republican respondents and 44 percent of both Democratic and Independent respondents say Powell should run for president.

Further, in a three-way race with President Clinton and Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole (R-Kansas), Powell would carry the biggest electoral prize of all, California, and finish in a dead heat with Dole in vote-rich Texas.

"The key to this (exploratory committee) thing is that if we hadn't made the move now, it wouldn't be happening," Haselrig, 72, a contractor from Johnstown, Pa., who makes his home in suburban Washington D.C., told the National Newspaper Publishers Association. "This is strictly a grass-roots campaign."

Haselrig, a Republican, is not new to pushing Black candidates for president. In 1976, he became the prime mover behind an ill-fated attempt to get former Massachusetts U.S. Sen. Edward Brooke nominated for the presidency. "I always felt that Powell had the making and trappings to be considered a candidate," Haselrig explained. Thus, on June 17, 1994, Haselrig launched the exploratory committee without Powell's permission. But he is in close contact with Powell's closest assistant, who has not dissuaded Haselrig's efforts.

Since then, Haselrig and his close associates have divided the nation into 10 regions and have started campaigns in all 50 states.

The former general's personal history is one of the factors behind his meteoric rise.

Powell served as the 12th chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from October 1989 to September 1993, under presidents Bush and Clinton.

He was born in New York City on April 5, 1937. He graduated from Morris High School in the Bronx and later graduated from City College of New York. While at CCNY, he participated in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, where he was commissioned as a second lieutenant upon his graduation in 1958.

Powell served two tours in Vietnam. He also was a battalion commander in Korea from 1973 to 1974. He later commanded the 2nd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division and V Corps in Europe. Prior to being named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Powell served as commander in chief, Forces Command, headquarters of which is in Fort McPherson, Ga.

Powell is married to the former Alma Vivian Johnson of Birmingham, Ala. They have one son, Michael, and two daughters, Linda and Annemarie.

HABITAT

block was an enormous group of people. The farther I walked up the block, the more workers I encountered. I felt as though I was in a maze of confusion. I walked in a tent where I had to read information relative to Habitat, sign a waiver, and met several new people. By 10 a.m., Winthrop Street was down to one lane. Plumbers, electricians, HVAC contractors, politicians, church folks, volunteers with food, media personnel and the plain curious were on hand.

Each house was managed by a general contractor and was overseen by a Habitat coordinator. There was a labor pool furnished by the general contractor and project volunteers. As I stood there, I did not know where to aim my camera. I did not know where to direct my attention. Giving was at its highest and sharing, I trust, will continue on that block for years to come.

I met one lady who will occupy one of those houses. She hammered nails, taped seams, moved walls and carried supplies along side of us.

I spoke with Christel DeHaan, CEO of RCI, the day before the houses were built. I expressed enthusiasm for people like her to create opportunity for others and to engage in community action. When the conversation ended, it was not what she said that inspired me, it was what she did. Christel motioned her hand as if she had a hammer in it.

What a thought! Large businesses can supply the capital to start a project, but it must be "worked" by a pool of laboring men and women, men and women who put "sweat equity" behind the swinging hammer.

I may not live in that house I helped build on Winthrop street. But as long as I live and drive past that house, I will realize I can make a difference.

Greenway Development Board to protect and to enhance the city's greenway resources, but the plan has been ignored by many.

In agreement with Kahlo is Ruth Hayes, a former member of the board. Speaking for herself and for Eli Bloom, president of the White River Greenways Foundation, Hayes says the greenway protection plan needs to be observed.

"We feel that it is very important that we defend the integrity of that master plan," she noted. "We also feel for the benefit of neighborhoods all over the county, we must protect that plan. Within the perimeters of that position, we support the housing development on the 19 private acres of the old amusement park. Our problem arises from the proposed encroachment into the public green space corridor.

"That proposal includes gating off any access by the public to the riverfront for several hundred feet. In effect, this creates an exclusive upscale enclave. We are told by the consultants that such an exclusive enclave is necessary for the development to work, but they will not share any numbers with us to prove or disapprove their position."

However, Lillian Davis, president of Riverside Civic League Inc. and a resident of Riverside Drive since 1958, said her organization and other neighborhood residents are in favor of the project, and that everyone involved has been cooperative and fair.

"We have attempted to address all concerns and questions about the project," said Davis. "We have even made concessions to the extent that our community is not willing to allow the developers to make any additional concessions to satisfy those opposed."

According to Davis, the community favors housing development because of stability and community preservation. She said the project is badly needed to attract families and businesses, to allow some leverage on addressing educational issues, and to maintain the neighborhood's property values.

Additionally, Davis said there would not be any dwelling units built on the banks of the river, but at least 20 feet from it.

"I believe those opposed are opposed because they feel the public would no longer have access to the parkway," she continued. "But, that is not true. People would still have freedom to jog and bicycle along the parkway. I have a concern that persons who do not use the river banks in this area are attempting to influence decisions that can only affect this particular area."

There have been several advance-publicized public meetings held about the project, Davis said. But Hayes and Kahlo contend they were not aware of some of them.

Steve Torain, executive director of United Northwest Area Development Corporation, says the project will benefit the entire Indianapolis area.

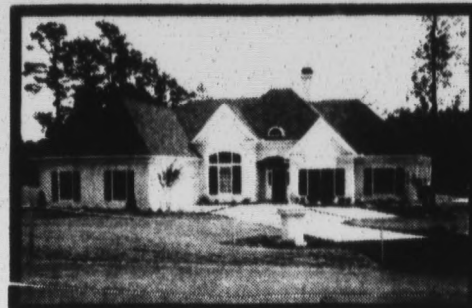

"I think it will be a tremendous boost to the UNWA (United North West Area) neighborhoods in particular, and to Indianapolis in general," Torain said. "Like inner-city development should be done, this project has included and taken into account the hopes, dreams and wishes of its neighbors."

ACTION

tion is immune to political trends," said Ramirez. "Members of the Supreme Court read the paper and watch television. They know the climate of the political trends and it has an effect on their decision in many cases. Within the next two years, we are going to see a major change and a different setting pertaining to the issue of affirmative action."

Ramirez also headed the Office of Minorities in Higher Education at the American Council on Education. Under her directorship, the office provided consultation to hundreds of colleges and universities on minority concerns and became a locus of information on minority higher education programs around the country.

Students also expressed how important it is for affirmative action to stay in existence.

"Until there is a solution for racism, there will always be a need for some type of affirmative action," said Toni Harrison, a student at IUPUI. "Affirmative action was intended to advance the economic and educational achievements of minorities that have been victimized by past discrimination."

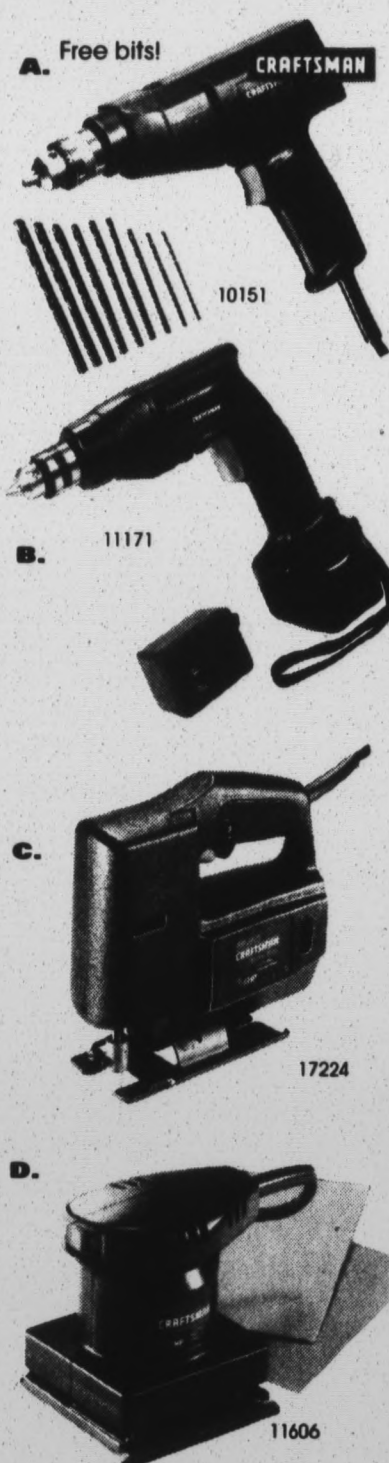

Questions were raised by concerned students pertaining to the logic behind affirmative action criticism.

"How can people with no point of reference think about what it is like for people who live in the inner city, who are not able to find a job, who cannot get an education?" asked John Trivison, an IUPUI student. "How can these people mandate and legislate the laws by which those people live? I have heard, and probably will continue to hear, how affirmative action is reverse discrimination and quotas. Something has got to change. It is better to have tried and failed than to never have tried at all."

"Many of the people who criticize affirmative action have benefited from it. If those who criticize the system ... don't like the system, then let's gather those who have a point of reference to create a new system that will work. Let's not be relying on people who have no point of reference to write the laws which other people live by."

Several students said legislators have been hiding behind their real feelings about affirmative action for political reasons.

"I think legislators are not involved or concerned with the situation of affirmative action because, deep down, they are scared," said IUPUI student Robert Ellington. "Right now, more than ever, I think they realize that brothers like myself, and other brothers, are becoming more vocal. We are increasing our numbers in college and graduating and we are becoming a factor of fear for them. That's why they can make rules and regulations like that."

Will 1 million African-American men really march?

What are we marching for?

Will 1 million Black men really march Oct. 16 in Washington?

In African-American communities from coast to coast, including Indianapolis, people are talking about and planning to attend the Million Man March.

It was called by Minister Louis Farrakhan and the Rev. Benjamin Chavis. It has been endorsed by a growing coalition of African-American organizations.

The major objective of the Million Man March is unusual. Usually, when groups hold a Washington march, they go demanding the federal government take some action or endorse some policy.

But the Million Man March is different. According to Farrakhan, it's designed to reconcile Black men to each other and to God.

Last week, Farrakhan explained that in holding the march "we will say to the world that, as Black men, we're ready to assume our responsibility as heads of our families; as the maintainers, providers, protectors of our women and children and as builders of our community."

Farrakhan and Chavis also call Oct. 16 a "Holy Day," encouraging Black men not going to Washington, and Black women and children, to take off work, school and shopping to show the strength and power of America's Black community.

A fair amount of Blacks have been reluctant to endorse the Million Man March, perceiving it to be a Nation of Islam thing. They're skittish because of the reputations of the Nation and Farrakhan.

But, the march has been endorsed by mainstream politicians — like the mayors of Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia — while key Black leaders, like the Rev. Jesse Jackson, have given conditional support.

In Indianapolis, there's plenty of talk about the march, but few visible signs our community leadership has embraced it. The head of the Nation of Islam in Indianapolis, the energetic and committed Minister Jeffrey X, has been the only one trying to organize support for the march here.

A million Black men descending on Washington is the equivalent of one out of every 13 Black men in this country being in one place at one time. As much as I want to see the look of terror on House Majority Leader Newt Gingrich's face, when he sees a million Black men outside his office, I'm more concerned with what happens after Oct. 16.

Why are we going to the nation's capital to atone and recommit Black men to our proper roles in our community? Why not go to Atlanta and atone at Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s grave? Or why not atone in front of the United Nations in New York, where we could demand the U.N. use its muscle to eradicate the drug trade and correct American racism?

Now, I support any effort to bring public attention to the myriad of problems facing our African-American community. And those who want to go to Washington should.

But, when you come back to Indianapolis, what are you gonna do to improve our community?

Are you going to be on the front lines in today's fight for freedom?

Are you going to demand that our city leaders, Black and white, wake up and create a coordinated plan to rid our neighborhoods of drugs?

Are you going to be on the front lines, fighting to save Metro service and Black bus drivers' jobs?

Are you going to give your money, energy and time to help make Z. Mae Jimison mayor?

Are you going to help take back our NAACP from the dilettantes and wannabes?

Will you, in the words of Malcolm X, "not be a part of the problem, but a part of the solution"?

My prayers are that the Million Man March will be safe, peaceful and successful.

I'm also praying that the march isn't really a media stunt, designed so thousands of Blacks can spend a day styling and profiling in Washington, spending millions in white-owned hotels and restaurants, hav-

But, excuse me if I remain skeptical.

Heard in the street

I'm tired of media stunts created in the name of battling drugs. First, Prosecutor Scott Newman had his "crack down on crack" neighborhood marches. Now, Mayor Stephen Goldsmith and Indianapolis Police Department Chief Donald Christ have their random drug-search roadblocks.

The problem of drugs, especially crack cocaine, is an epidemic. It's time our city develops a coherent, intelligent strategy to fight it. We don't need window dressing in an election year.

Our city has no drug policy or strategy. Everybody — from the mayor, to IPD, the prosecutor, even our invisible U.S. attorney — is doing his or her own thing and keeping our neighborhoods in the dark.

That must stop! We need a comprehensive, citywide plan to combat the sale of drugs in our neighborhoods.

Goldsmith should spend a few hours away from his campaign for governor and convene an emergency meeting of his Greater Indianapolis Progress Committee.

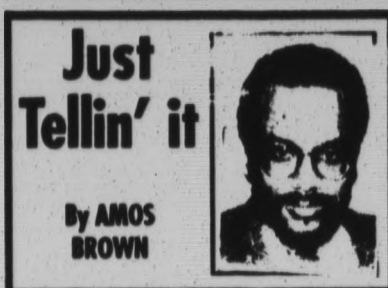

He should demand GIPC develop, within 60 days, in close consultation with law enforcement and grass-roots neighborhoods leadership, an effective game plan to fight the drug traffic in this city.

Mayor, how can you run the state if you can't clean up drugs in our city?

Africafest at the Indianapolis Museum of Art was a rousing success.

Thousands packed the museum and grounds for a great day of learning and fellowship.

Special thanks to the Black-owned businesses who helped make Africafest a success, including Mays Chemical, Stewart Moving and Storage, Payton Wells Chevrolet, Pillow Express Delivery, W53AV Channel 53, and radio stations WTLC and WHHH.

ing a big ego trip at our expense. I hope Oct. 16 is the first day of a new unity in America's Black community.

Freeman sets standard in 'Seven'

MOVIE REVIEW

Overall rating ★★★★★

By STEVE THOMAS
Staff Writer

Detective story motion pictures never will be the same. The Sept. 22 New Line Cinema release "Seven" redefines the way in which cop-buddies films will be made.

This film, starring Morgan Freeman and Brad Pitt, is so trend setting—in the context of 1990s cop genre—that it reduces the "Lethal Weapon" series to mere caricature.

Freeman plays 34-year veteran, and incipient retiree, Lt. William Somerset. His young replacement, Detective David Mills, played by Pitt, becomes his partner for seven dark days.

The officers travel from one grizzly murder scene to another, gathering pieces of a proverbial road-map puzzle leading to killer John Doe, played by Kevin Spacey.

How the "good guys" nab him, and the atrocities they find on a path of savagery, will get the movie goer's attention. The climax portrays a heart-racing moral dilemma.

Each murder victim is guilty, in the killer's mind, of committing one of the seven deadly sins.

"Seven," directed by David Fincher and written by Andrew Walker, takes cop-movie dialogue to a refreshing level. The officers are not spewing out corny cop jargon. There are no precinct smart-aleck comedians.

The film shows police work as utterly serious business in which

There is a price to pay to have one's name in lights and to be heard on radio stations coast to coast. The music industry is a mine field rigged with charlatan agents, sleazy record company song peddlers, and the incalculable risk of not being good enough to be worthy of admiration.

The Civic Theatre production of "Dreamgirls," which will run through Oct. 8, exposes the industry and celebrates the triumphs of four strong women who have the talent and the heart to make it in the big time. The lyrics of Tom Eyen are splendidly performed in this production, directed by David Thome. "Dreamgirls" opened on Broadway in 1981.

"Dreamgirls" chronicles the show-business lives of a female singing trio. Effie White is played by Mary Simonds. Seneka Johnson plays Deena Jones. Shannon Oglesby plays Lorrell Robinson. The audience follows the Dreamettes on their obstacle course to stardom, emerging with the innocent exuberance of the ladies' talent-show origins.

They get a break as backup singers for James "Thunder" Early, played by Kevin Johnson. From there, the ladies get their own act, as The Dreams, under the guiding (if not overbearing) hand of Curtis Taylor Jr., a car salesman made good, played by Duane Newman. Kevin Dodson plays musical genius C.C., Effie's brother.

Curtis calls the shots with dispassionate reserve. But he starts making decisions with his heart rather than with his intellect and stumbles down a slope leading into the teeth of litigation. Curtis strains his relationships with a lot of people, including Effie when he replaces her with Michele Morris, played by Sherri Brown.

The ladies see some hard times and internal turmoil. But they go out as stars with their heads held

On the Air

Recorder Staff Report

"Showtime at the Apollo" is bringing a new look and a children's segment to its syndication audience spread throughout 91 U.S. television stations.

Chuck Sutton is the new co-executive producer of "Apollo." The former producer of the show is responsible for the addition of an amateur children's segment. Every week, two children will compete in a "King of the Hill" segment.

These four divas and their supporting cast members churn out tunes which mark the times, notably the transition from the 1960s to the 1970s and the strain popular tastes placed on Black performers struggling to maintain an identity and style all their own. Historical references enhance the plot's credibility, including portrayals of the re-release of Black hits by white artists — and by definition mainstream performers — who laughed all the way to the bank.

Costumes and sets are positively dazzling.

Finally, if there is no other reason to see this production, experience the vocals of Simonds' Effie. Anyone with a pulse will be moved by her performance, particularly during her rendition of "And I Am Telling You I'm Not Going."

"Dreamgirls" is worthy of this enthusiastic endorsement.

'Broadway Bound' reflects reality

■ Recommend

Life is no yellow brick road to our dreams. Whether we live up to the expectations of youthful idealism or not, our setbacks and how we deal with them ultimately define who we become. We may look back over the debris of painful recollections and find humor.

The Jerome household in Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound" is inflated with tension, which is manufactured by people trying to either become something or find out who they are. That tension is eased by humor and by the seldom-uttered underlying impression that its members love each other.

The Indiana Repertory Theatre production makes a theater goer feel as well as realize the family's problems. This Jewish family from Brighton Beach, N.Y. does not overcome problems. Its members survive them, somehow. This touching portrayal of family dynamics will occupy the IRT Mainstage through Oct. 14.

Multiple strands of conflict between family members in the Jerome home — consisting of a meticulously realistic set — drive the story: The marriage of mother Kate (Marilyn Pasekoff) and father Jack (Robert Elliott) is on the rocks. Maternal grandfather Ben (Maury Cooper) remains in the household, forsaking his own wife, because he wants to be there for Kate. Yet his staunch adherence to socialist doctrine separates him emotionally and otherwise from his Park Avenue daughter Blanche (Madeline Miller), who is married to a rich garment district business leader. Jerome brothers Stan (Tony Freeman) and narrator Eugene (Gordon Greenberg) are trying to become comedy writers — and they get their CBS break — but nothing in the production is funnier or occasionally more tragic than their colliding sibling perspectives on life and their realization that all is not well in the household. The brothers try to get their father's approval and more conflict results. And there is Kate, who is in conflict with herself as a middle-age woman trying to determine her place as her children grow up, her parents grow very old and her husband grows tired of the doldrums of marriage.

There is a lot of laughs, despite the serious messages.

The IRT production of "Broadway Bound" is outstanding.

'SEVEN'

there are no heroes, merely survivors — such as Freeman's Somerset — who make it through a career physically and emotionally alive although reasonably affected by all the ugly things they see.

Peripheral to the case, Somerset and Mills have lives, something else often missing in '90s cop drama.

Freeman's character establishes a place for Black male police-action film actors. Somerset is not a higher-up who comes out of his office only to curse out somebody. He is not a simpleton ranting about white people. He is a good cop and an intelligent man. His knowledge of literature comes in handy as police resort to the library for clues while tracking down the intellectually wicked murderer.

"Seven" is known as much for film technique as for any other virtue. None of the tactics are new. But they are dusted off and thrown into a film which is emerging in an era of unsophistication — shooting, car chasing and detonating — polluting the police-story genre.

The film uses several techniques to portray the hopeless isolation of inner-city life and the feeling that all is not well: constant rainy days, darkened interiors, silhouettes, up-angle shots of characters, handheld-camera filmed chase sequences, mournful synthesized musical scores and extreme close-ups to show detail in characters' battle-worn faces.

The icing on the cake is the exquisite mixing of urban sounds into the dialogue and the Hitchcockian method of letting acting, rather than grotesque detail, convey the ugliness of some findings. (Forewarned: there are a few seconds of male nudity.)

Richard Roundtree makes a brief and credible appearance.

"Seven" is spellbinding.

The program sports a new look as it enters its ninth season.

The show, created by Percy Sutton, is the career-launching pad of several stars, including Mark Curry, Sinbad and the show's host Steve Harvey.

Many stars of a bygone entertainment era got their starts in the historic New York theater, including Billie Holiday, Sarah Vaughn, Count Basie and Nat "King" Cole.

BURN baby BURN

Black college radio stations will not have to rely on established mainstream radio networks. They will have their own, starting Oct. 9 as the Black University Radio Network pierces the airwaves of about 75 Black college campus stations.

The network is the brainchild of D. Blackmon-Bailey Inc./Bailey Broadcasting Services. Diane Blackmon-Bailey is the network's founder and executive producer.

BURN will feature entertainment and news programming. It also will offer internships, student job opportunities, interactive student contests and national promotions.

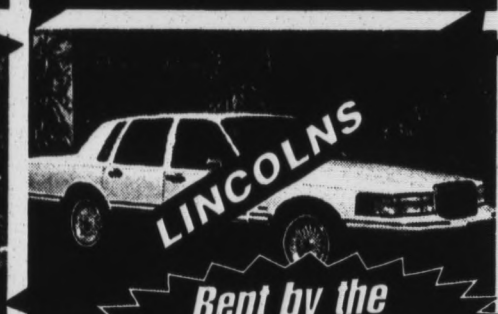

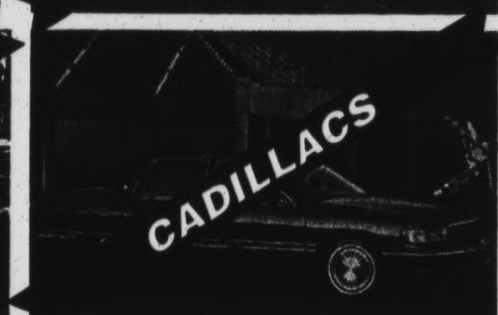

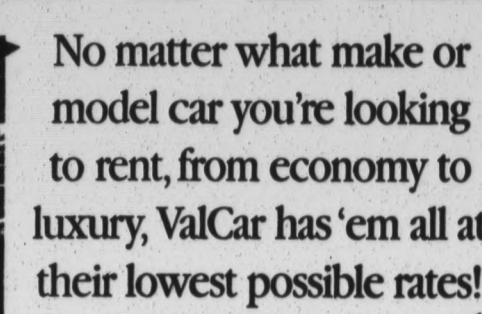

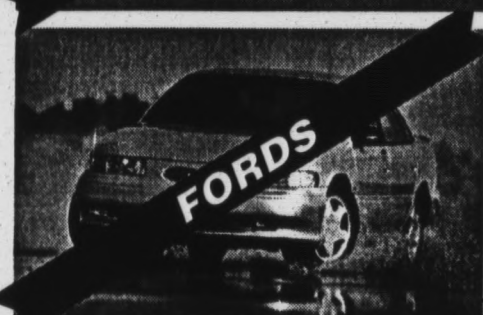

BURN essentially will create a radio-linked community of Black colleges.

All The Things We Are.

GET THE LEAD OUT.

Every day there's a new chance to make a small fortune on paper. One dollar could win you $500 with Daily 3 or $5,000 with Daily 4. Of course, you could always try a $5.00 straight bet and walk off with $2,500 from Daily 3 or $25,000 from Daily 4. So what are you waiting for? There's a new drawing daily. Don't forget to pencil us in.

Black Beauty: Black women, no matter their size or economic background, love to look good. Black women dress to the nines, faces made up to perfection, with hair perfectly styled as well.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, African Americans spend more than $18 billion a year on clothing and more than $3 billion on personal care, which includes cosmetics.

But those numbers don't add up, when it comes to the fashion and beauty industry courting Black women.

To this day, many top beauty and clothing companies continue to use only white models to promote their products. McGee Williams, senior vice president and general manager of Burrell Communications Group in Atlanta, says it's obvious why these companies don't cater to Black women.

"My sense is that there are a number of companies out there that just have not arrived, so to speak, in recognizing the real value of the African-American consumer market," Williams says. "African Americans have always spent disproportionately on cosmetics, beauty aids, clothing, and companies have not recognized that this is a very viable market in terms of spending and a lot of them haven't gotten to that point."

In 1992, the New York Department of Consumer Affairs did a study of 14 major companies which advertise in top magazines. The result: seven companies — including Calvin Klein, Estee Lauder and Lancome — included no Black models and no other minorities in their ads. None of those companies returned our calls for this story.

Gaunha Singho, senior vice president and creative director of The Mingo Group, says these companies probably do realize the spending power of African-American women, but they simply don't care to cater them.

Lee Bailey's
RADIO SCOPE
The entertainment magazine of the air.

"They don't feel like Black women are their market," Singho says. "Now, if they wanted to reach them, they would go out and develop a product for them, like some of these companies have done. But Estee Lauder, Lancome, they have a very strong European feel to them and that's who they target."

Faith: As the first female singer off Sean "Puffy" Combs' Bad Boy Entertainment label, Faith is making a strong stand. Her "You Used to Love Me" is a big hit, zooming up into the top five in a matter of weeks.

But she's no overnight sensation. Faith has been kicking round the New York scene for some time, before her ship finally came in. She started off working with Christopher Williams and Al B. Sure.

From there, she met Combs, who let her co-write, arrange and sing background on Usher's Album. Puffy also hooked Pebbles and Mary J. Blige, for whom Faith co-wrote four songs on the "My Life" album. Now that Faith's on her own, she's being compared to Mary J., but she doesn't mind.

"Mary is cool, that's why I like her," she says. "When I met her, we hit it off really good. We're like sisters. Every time she's in town, we hang out. If I'm on the road and I can go see her, I go see her. (So) I don't get mad because she's respected, she has love. Everywhere I go, the people love Mary. They love Mary."

Faith is married to Notorious B.I.G. The two met at a Bad Boy family photo shoot. She says it wasn't love at first sight, but B.I.G. was ready to marry Faith after knowing her only two weeks. By all accounts, the pair are very much in love, although he has a strange way of publicly expressing his devotion. He's been quoted in the press as saying some raunchy things about Faith.

"But between me and him, everything's good," says Faith. "He's real nice. He's like a big bunch of love ... and he loves me."

Feedback: Cary writes: "Recently, I saw a '70s music festival on HBO hosted by Sinbad. I saw Earth, Wind and Fire, but I didn't see Maurice White. Where is he?"

Maurice White hasn't toured with the group all year. Sources have told us he is suffering from multiple sclerosis. But that hasn't kept White from being busy. When Earth, Wind and Fire was in New Orleans for the Essence Music Festival, group member Phillip Bailey told us what White has been up to.

"Maurice is at home in the studio, writing and producing songs," Bailey said. "He chose not to go on the road anymore and he's starting his own record company."

Bailey says White is still very much involved with the group, as bandleader and as the man who signs their paychecks. The group, along with White, will head back into the studio this fall.

Give the gift which keeps on giving

By STEPHEN B. JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Every year, more than 30,000 people in the state of Indiana sit and wait for an available heart for transplant while only 2,000 of them receive one.

Within the African-American community, there is a large number of patients waiting for an organ transplant, but organs are not available for them because, for many reasons, African Americans do not donate. Organ transplantation is seriously limited by a lack of available organs.

Jonathan Reese is a 33-year-old African-American male who for less than three weeks has been patiently waiting for a heart for a transplant operation. With the exception of an enlarged heart, he was considered to be healthy by his doctors.

While Reese waits for a donor, he lives from day to day with an artificial heart within his body. His artificial heart is what keeps him alive.

Currently, he is on the "status one" top priority list, which means when the next heart becomes available that will match his body's chemistry, he will receive it.

But how long will that take?

"I feel it is very important for us (African Americans) to learn the importance of donating our organs if for no other reason to carry on our heritage," said Reese. "It is a very selfish concept for people to feel that they came with it they should go out with it without trying to help somebody. If you can save someone's life, if you are losing your own life, that is a very brave and courageous thing to do and should be encouraged by everyone."

Compared to the original artificial hearts, the new (Novacor) models allow Reese to get up and move around instead of being confined to his bed in the intensive care unit.

Plans are being made for Reese to leave the hospital under a doctor's care for a couple of hours to go on a "field trip."

"Once we remove his artificial heart and replace it with a new heart, Jonathan will be healthy because a lot of the illness he experienced will be corrected as a result of his artificial heart," said Dr. David Hormuth, Reese's surgeon. "When I'd first seen Jonathan, he was on his death bed, it took everything he had for him to say 'yes' and 'no.' Now, he is up and moving around."

"It is very important for people from every race, color or creed to donate. When members of the family make a decision about a person when they are about to die, there are a lot of emotions which are involved pertaining to organ donation. It is important for people to discuss their intentions with their family to let them know their wishes before the situation occurs."

Although his family looks at his artificial heart as a blessing, Reese experiences a lot of pain and discomfort.

"It is very painful, but it is also a blessing," he said. "The advantage to the artificial heart is that it keeps me alive. The disadvantage is it is very painful and you know it is there. It hurts, it's uncomfortable and I have to take lots of pain pills to deal with the pain."

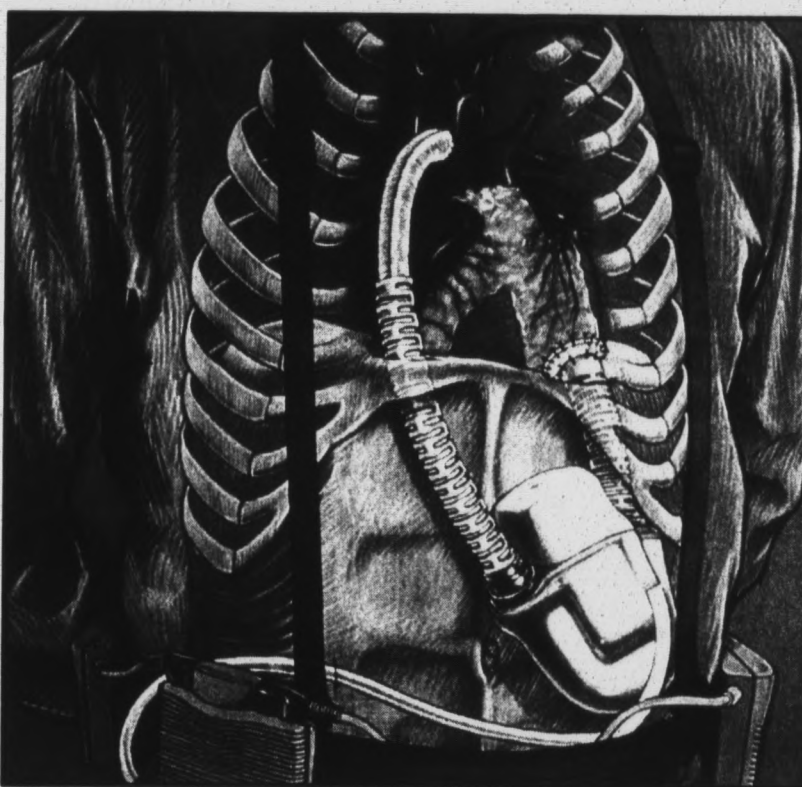

Heart problems run high in Reese's family. He lost an older brother to a heart problem, his mother has heart problems, and another brother had a stroke. He stresses the need to get a physical exam as early as possible and to correct poor eating habits early in life.

"It is very important to have a physical," said Reese. "If I had been getting physicals, I would have known about my enlarged heart much sooner. Now, they are putting the nutritional contents on the food we buy so we know what is in what we eat. We should start as early as possible to make a conscious effort to watch what we eat. It is never too early or too late to change our diets."

The lack of education and a fear of donating organs are two of the main reasons people from the African-American community do not donate their organs.

"It is really important for people to donate to help someone else," said Willie Russ, an August 1991 heart transplant recipient. "African Americans really did not know about organ donation about 25 years ago. It is a wonderful concept because it gives people an opportunity to give and receive a blessing."

A cry to the African-American community has been extended from Reese's family to help him receive a heart as soon as possible.

"Right now, we are looking for him a heart as soon as possible," said Kathy, Reese's wife of four years. "The pump he is on now will only carry him for so many days. It is real important for him to get a heart. It is strange for him to have a mechanical heart but, at the same time, it was our only hope to keep him alive. It is a blessing to have the mechanical heart because without it he would not be here."

"It is so hard for people to donate, especially Black people within our community who don't want to donate. The mechanical heart is a blessing and is something for us to move forward with."

An optimistic Reese vows to treat his new heart like a pearl.

"Once I get my new heart, all of my bad (fast food) eating habits I'm going to change," said Reese. "I'm going to have to protect my new heart and care for it just like it is a pearl. So things I'm doing now, I will not be able to do because I will be treating my new heart like a pearl."

One of the first things Reese wants to do after he gets out of the hospital is go to church.

Body by Crayton

By ANDRE CRAYTON

Drugs infect the sport of bodybuilding

The basic goal and question of every aspiring bodybuilder is how can I build muscle while losing bodyfat? Incidentally, when I say bodybuilder, I mean any individual who is working out his or her body.

It's important to know that genetically-gifted individuals seem to be able to build muscle at an amazing rate while losing fat.

I'd be fooling myself, and you, if I didn't acknowledge the effect of anabolic steroids and other muscle-building, fat-burning agents — like growth hormone and clenbuterol — on the body's ability to become super ripped.

There are no ifs, ands or buts about it, anabolic agents work. Anabolic agents, however, create a type of thin skin, a cellophane-over-raw-muscle appearance that can never be achieved "naturally."

Drugs are a fact of life in the major sport of bodybuilding and such drugs are a fact of life concerning every bodybuilder.

If you can find a doctor who will prescribe you growth hormone and anabolic steroids, your fat-loss and muscle-building worries are over. However, the chance of finding a doctor who will prescribe such medications is about zero.

Most of the clients I train — mainly men and young, aspiring bodybuilders — want to know how to build muscle and lose fat "naturally," without resorting to anabolic agents.

They will take every supplementation in the book, if they think it will help, especially if they believe those supplements will provide drug-like effects.

The program

I strongly believe the natural bodybuilder should never train more than two days consecutively without taking a day off, unless he or she is using the one-body-part-a-day program, through which you train five to six days consecutively because you're training only a small area of the body and not putting such severe demands on the body's energy reserves. You do more sets for a muscle than you normally would on the standard three to four days on/one day off routine. But, because you do fewer total sets per workload, the body isn't taxed so much, hence recovery and growth are enhanced on this routine. I suggest keeping total sets per workout to 20 or under.

A good sample mass-building one-body-part-a-day schedule: Day 1, leg; 2, chest; 3, lat lower back; 4, delts and traps; 5, arms; 6-7, rest. If you wish, train six days on, one day off and split up either legs and arms regimens. For example, train arms on a separate day from quads or biceps; forearms on a separate day from triceps, depending on whether you need to specialize more on arms or legs.

However, if the one-body-part-a-day routine isn't to your liking, or you don't have the time to schedule five to six consecutive workouts, I suggest you train with one of the following: Try an every-other-day routine, while splitting the body three ways. Try two days on/one day off, while splitting the body four ways. Either method will help you mass up without increasing bodyfat levels.

Indy sailor aboard Mount Vernon on deployment

Like prize fighters who train long and hard for championship bouts, Navy ships and their crews train for months to get ready for major overseas deployments.

Navy Petty Officer Third Class Cullin M. Wilson and the crew of USS Mount Vernon (LSD-39) had spent more than half a year training at sea, conducting exercises as well as pre-deployment inspections and evaluations.

Wilson and the rest of the crew, after getting into tip-top shape, embarked in June on an overseas deployment that will take them halfway around the world.

"The months of training have prepared me for whatever we may face while we're underway," said Wilson, the 27-year-old son of Mildred Wilson of Indianapolis.

As a postal clerk on board the 13,700-ton Mount Vernon, Wilson handles all incoming and outgoing mail. Mail is a critical element in the morale of the crew during deployments.

Equipped with the latest communications and combat systems, Mount Vernon is able to transport and operate heavy landing craft in support of combat operations or humanitarian relief efforts in areas of unrest around the world.

Wilson, a 1986 graduate of Northwest High School, views the mission of his ship as significant and he believes that deployments like the upcoming six-month float are necessary.

"Deployments like these are important in order to keep our presence known throughout the world," said Wilson.

Along with the top-notch training Wilson has received, he finds many other aspects of life in the Navy rewarding.

"The most rewarding aspect of being in the Navy is being able to see the world," said the five-year Navy veteran.

Wilson and the rest of the crew of Mount Vernon will deploy to the Western Pacific and Indian Ocean as part of the USS New Orleans Amphibious Ready Group. Even though he will be away from friends and family for six months, he sees the deployment as an opportunity to accomplish personal and professional goals.

"I'm looking forward to completing the enlisted surface warfare specialist training along with some college courses," Wilson said.

Wilson believes that the Navy, along with its high-quality training and excellent benefits, is the ideal place for a person to get a heads up in life.

"I would recommend the Navy to others because it can help financially and give you a head start in life," added Wilson.

OUR TOWN

Still time to help Jazmine

Nine-month-old Jazmine Barlow was diagnosed shortly after birth with biliary atresia. Doctors feel Barlow's only chance at survival is a liver transplant. Barlow was evaluated, and accepted as a candidate, at Indiana University Medical Center, the transplant venue.

Children's Organ Transplant Association Inc. of Bloomington, Ind. is a federally recognized national charity which assures no individual is denied a transplant due to a lack of funds. Donations may be mailed to Bank One, 4202 N. Franklin Road, Indianapolis. Donations also may be made in person at any Indianapolis area branch location. Make checks or money orders payable to "COTA for Jazmine" and write account number 80-0246587 in the memo space.

Vision screening on the house

Free vision and glaucoma screenings are available at the Vision Screening Center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Wednesdays at 911 E. 86th St. For more information or to make an appointment, call 259-8185.

Indiana HIV/STD Hotline open

- ° (800) 848-AIDS
- ° (800) 872-1846 (TTY)

Call 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. It's run by the Indiana State Department of Health

Attention smokers

Do you want to quit smoking? If you are one of the four-in-five smokers who want to quit smoking, the lung association offers smoking cessation clinics for you. The clinic will show you how to make positive changes needed to break your smoking habit. For a free brochure and more information, call 573-3900.

Westview needs volunteers

Westview Hospital, 3630 Guion Road, needs volunteers to greet visitors, to escort newly-admitted patients, and to perform other services from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., weekdays. For more information, call Betty Orr at 920-7390.

King's Kids and Daughters open

King's Kids and Daughters is a program designed to help youth develop good public speaking skills, to nurture their self-esteem and self-confidence. The King's Kids is an oratory team of youth ages 4-16 that tours the city reciting the works of Martin Luther King Jr., Mari Evans, Langston Hughes, Maya Angelou and many more. Applications are currently being accepted, but spaces are limited. King's Kids meet at 3 p.m. every second and fourth Saturday of the month at the Martin Luther King Center, 3909 N. Meridian St. For more information, call Regina Marsh at 923-4581.

St. Vincent needs volunteers

The St. Vincent Community

Health Network Hospice Fall Volunteer Training class will be held from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Classes will meet every Monday and Thursday for four weeks at The Marten House, 1801 W. 86th St. For more information, call 338-4011.

Y-Me to host fashion show

Y-Me of Central Indiana, a breast cancer information and support group, will hold its first annual fund-raiser on Saturday, Oct. 7 at the Westin Hotel in downtown Indianapolis. A reception will begin at 11 a.m. Lunch will be served at noon, followed by a fashion show. The fashion show will feature breast cancer survivors and their families, along with health care professionals and celebrities, modeling fashions from area retailers.

In Indiana, during 1995, it is estimated that 4,200 women will be diagnosed and 1,100 will die of breast cancer. Every woman is at risk with more than 75 percent of new cases being diagnosed in women with no family history of breast cancer. For more information, call 848-9598.

Red Cross needs drivers

The American Red Cross of Greater Indianapolis is looking for drivers who can make a difference in the health of people within their communities. Drivers services will be used Monday through Friday to take patients to their medical appointments. For more information, call either Martha Roath or Sandi Lyle at 684-4332.

St. Vincent Net to hold forum on bedwetting

In an effort to help families deal with the difficult issue of bedwetting, the Children's Museum of Indianapolis is partnering with the St. Vincent Community Health Network to provide a free educational seminar at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 3. For more information, and to register for the seminar, call 582-7037. If you cannot attend the seminar, but would like more information about primary nocturnal enuresis, contact the National Kidney Foundation of Indiana at 693-6534.

Search on for Mrs. Indiana

Mrs. Indiana International officials are looking for the next Mrs. Indianapolis. The woman selected will receive her crown and banner and will have the opportunity to represent Indianapolis at the 1996 Mrs. Indiana International pageant, which will be held in Franklin, Ind., March 30-31. Contestants must be between the ages of 24 and 55, married for a minimum of two years, and residents of the Indianapolis area for at least six months. For more information, call 889-1280.

Crime Watch meeting scheduled

The Concerned Neighborhood Association scheduled its Neighborhood Crime Watch meeting for 6 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 28 at the North United Methodist Church, 3808 N. Meridian St. For more information, call Emma Dow at 923-9832.

Professional cleaning need not be once a year

Q: How often should teeth be professionally cleaned?

A: Cleaning frequently depends on the individual patient. Some are more susceptible to gum breakdown and periodontal problems than others. Or they smoke, drink a lot of coffee or tea, habits which can stain teeth badly. And still other patients simply may be tartar builders, forming it more quickly than average, which is particularly true of diabetics.

How often your teeth should be cleaned can range from once a year, if you're very good about your dental habits, to once every three months if you tend to be neglectful.

Your dental history and plaque-control habits will help you and your dentist determine the frequency of cleaning.

Youth

At Philip Morris, we believe that adults have the right to choose whether to smoke or not.

Minors, on the other hand, should not smoke. Period.

We also believe that preventing minors from having access to cigarettes is the key to addressing this issue.

That's why we recently launched Action Against Access, one of the most comprehensive programs ever introduced to combat the issue of youth access to cigarettes.

Action Against Access is a series of tough initiatives that have as their ultimate goal making all cigarette sales face-to-face transactions so age can be verified in person.

We are confident that, when fully implemented, this program will make a difference.

Everyone has a role to play in preventing youth access: educators, lawmakers, parents, communities. And, of course, the tobacco industry.

At Philip Morris we will continue to take a leadership role so that minors do not have access to cigarettes.

We want you to know where we stand.

Facts Matter

As part of Action Against Access, all Philip Morris cigarette packs and cartons in the United States will carry the following notice: "Underage sale prohibited."

Christians network for noble cause

There will be a Christians in Business Trade Show and Christian Youth Explosion on Saturday, Sept. 30 and Sunday, Oct. 1 at the South Pavilion, Indiana State Fairgrounds.

The goal of this show is to inform the Christian community of members offering professional services, goods and merchandise. The show will be an instrument in promoting networking opportunities and economic growth.

For more information call 761-7604.

There will be numerous events and workshops:

- Church business owners: This is an opportunity for Christians to showcase their talents and to introduce their services, goods and merchandise to churches, the Christian community, organizations, corporations, small and home-based businesses and the public.
- Seminars/workshops: There will be ongoing seminars and workshops providing information to individuals interested in starting a business.
- "Blessed Are the Peacemakers" focuses on Christian approaches to conflict resolution. It will be presented by Mark Robbins, an Indianapolis attorney and mediator.
- "How to Write an Effective Business Plan" will be presented by Greg Genrick of Eastside Community Investments.
- "Total Cash Management" will focus on factoring and how to turn your accounts receivable into cash. The presenter will be Romero

Brice of Brice Funding Group.

■ "An Optimistic Theology: Climate for Better Business" presenters will be the ministry team of Pastor E. Keith Kirkland and Dr. Jim Brandyberry of the newly formed downtown congregation of Sovereign Grace Fellowship.

■ Talent Showcase is designed to give children, youth and young adults an opportunity to showcase their God-given talents. This is not a competition.

The event will include participation of a broad spectrum of the Christian community:

- Beautiful Feet Dance Ministry
- John 3-16 Bookstore
- Model Makers Inc. Fashion Show
- Soloist, Jerome Adkins
- Drill Teams: Eastern Star Drill Team, Phillips Grand Steppers, Northside New Era Steppers for Christ
- Barnes United African American Dance
- Models for Christ (singers and mime)
- Guest Christian celebrities, signing autographs
- Binky (the Christian clown) and the Bible

To encourage participation, a portion of the proceeds will be given to the scholarship fund or fund designated by the congregation with the largest number of members and to the church with the highest percentage of its membership participating in the trade show.

Church flock does its own share of dirt

Dear Ms. McCane,

I have a great concern that is really quite sensitive. It's about misappropriation in our churches.

I know that most of the time you address unscrupulous behavior on the part of ministers.

Sometimes, folks like to think that the "shepherd" does all the fleeing. Well, let me tell you that I seen quite a bit of fleeing on the part of the "flock," too.

You wouldn't think that people in church would steal or "re-align" the resources to fatten up their own tills, but it happens.

I have seen Bibles and other reading materials, kitchen utensils, money, food and other things just "disappear" from the church. I have even had members to solicit money and other donations from me for a particular use and later realized these donations never made it to their intended destinations or that only part of the donation was used and the rest "appropriated" to the solicitor's private stash.

I have also known members to solicit money for items that were supposed to cost one amount and later found that although the item did not cost as much, the balance of the solicited amount was never turned in to the church.

Sometimes, we have pitch-in dinners at the church and those in charge wiggle around and find a way to hoard the best dishes (some of our members can cook and some can't) away for themselves. If they are on the serving line, these persons will often give "stingy" portions to dinner guests in order to have enough to cart off at the end of an affair. I know you will find this hard to believe, but it's all true. I've seen it with my own eyes.

I don't want to sound paranoid, but please don't print my name or initials. These church members will be angry with me for a lifetime.

No initials, please

Dear No initials,

If your church members are really doing such things, they need to be worried about more than your anger.

God Almighty, Himself, is who they're really cheating! And don't wonder about being "hard to believe." You'd be surprised at the off-the-wall antics I've seen from the Christian world.

"Would a man rob God?" the question is asked. And I say, "Yes ... men, women and children rob God every day. Some even have the gall to attempt to justify the robbery."

If you're asking me how church folk can be so callous and hypocritical, I have yet to discover that. I imagine some like to think that only what their fellow members can see really counts.

Some who pilfer food items from their churches probably justify it by the fact that they have "poor relatives at home" who could use the food and there's no sense in discarding it.

When the fact is if they would solicit "God's property" in good, frugal conscience and disburse of it with a sharing, Christian heart, there wouldn't be much "leftover" to discard in the first place.

As far as money and other items, the same applies. As African-American church folk, we like to think that our donations go just

Malcolm X

Author explores life of Malcolm X

The mythic figure of Malcolm X conjures up a variety of images: Black nationalist, extremist, civil rights leader, hero.

But how often is Malcolm X understood as a religious leader, a man profoundly affected by his relationship with Allah?

"On the Side of My People: A Religious Life of Malcolm X," to be published in November by the New York University Press, is the first book-length treatment of Malcolm X's religious life. Written by Louis A. DeCaro Jr., a religious educator and contributing editor to REVIEW Bethel's Voice, this book shows Malcolm X as not just a political man, but as a man of Allah, struggling with salvation and as concerned with redemption as with revolution.

During Malcolm's life and since, the press has focused on the Nation of Islam's rejection of integration, offering an extremely limited picture of its ideology and religious philosophy. Mainstream media have ignored the religious foundation at the heart of the Nation and failed to show it in light of other separatist religious movements.

With the spirituality and culture of Black Islam unexplored, and the most controversial elements of the Nation exploited, its most famous member, according to DeCaro, became one of the most misunderstood leaders in history.

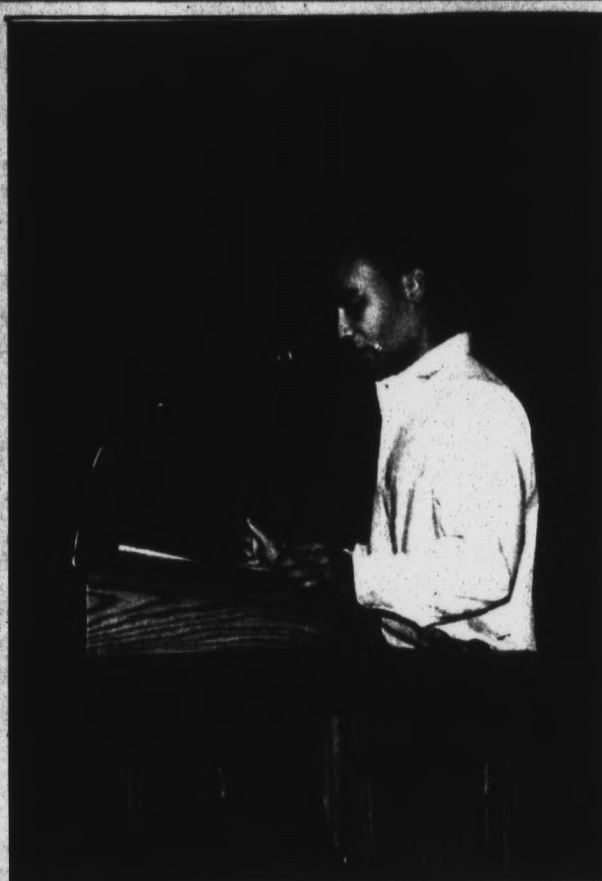

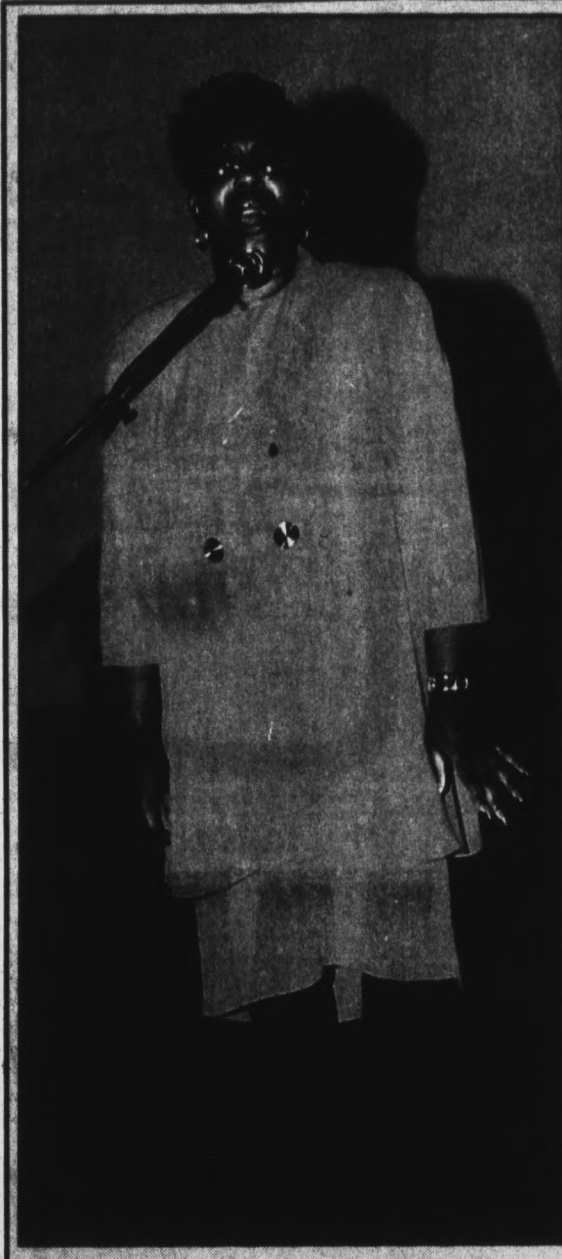

Drawing on a wide variety of sources, including extensive interviews with Malcolm's oldest brother Wilfred, FBI surveillance documents, the Black press and tape-recorded speeches and interviews, DeCaro examines the charismatic leader from the standpoint of his two conversion experiences: to the Nation while he was in jail and to traditional Islam climaxing in his pilgrimage to Mecca.

"On the Side of My People" examines Malcolm beyond his well-known years as spokesman for the Nation, exploring his early religious training and the influence of his Garveyite parents, his relationships with Elijah Muhammad, his often overlooked journey to Africa in 1959, and his life as traditional Muslim after the 1964 pilgrimage.

DeCaro also presents a critical analysis of "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," providing insight into the motivation behind Malcolm's own story and offering a key to understanding how and why Malcolm portrayed his life in his own autobiography as told to Alex Haley.

DeCaro holds graduate degrees from Westminster Theological Seminary and NYU. Bethel's Voice, to which he is a contributing editor, is the weekly publication of Bethel Gospel Assembly in Harlem, where he is member.

In an author's note, DeCaro says: "I have refrained from engaging in any religious debates with the Nation and the legacy of its founder and activities ... thus while this is a Christian's book, it is not a Christian book on Malcolm X."

Wesley UMC Survival Skills for Women fall workshops continue

Wesley United Methodist Church, in cooperation with Christamore House Community Center, is again offering the nationally acclaimed Survival Skills For Women, this fall.

SSW is a unique, powerful life-skills/job-readiness training system that sparks dramatic changes in women's lives. Its basis is a series of 10 workshops and five "labs" that teach women to become self-sufficient, manage their lives and take care of their children, find and keep jobs, end their dependence on public assistance or improve their plight of surviving on dead-end, entry-level jobs.

SSW provides training, support, encouragement and empowerment to move participants from powerlessness and low self-esteem toward personal well-being, confidence and financial independence. Working from her premise that every person has value and something to contribute, SSW helps each participant to assess her strengths and build on them, while giving support and instruction on how to improve skills and overcome barriers.

Graduates of previous classes already have sought and found better jobs, enrolled in training courses, left unhealthy relationships, and sought medical treatment for ongoing health problems.

SSW workshops will be every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from Monday, Oct. 2 to Nov. 3. Workshop hours are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Wesley United Methodist Church.

In addition to the workshops and labs, SSW provides breakfast, child care and transportation assistance at no cost. Recently, the Junior League of Indianapolis gave an assistance grant to fund this session. Each graduate receives one outfit from The Next to New Shop, a project of The Junior League of Indianapolis.

For more information on how to enroll, call Christamore House at 635-7211.

For more information on SSW, call either Kim Grant at 271-2961, Rhonda Shipley at 927-9304 or DeeEllen Davis at 274-6707 (work)/ 293-4291 (home).

It's a Community A-Fair

The congregation of Our Savior Evangelical Lutheran Church hears from the Rev. Doug Kenny, who is pastor of the church located at 25th Street and North Capitol Avenue. The church's first Community A-Fair ended recently with worship services under the tent and a light lunch.

DEAR RECORDER SUPPORTER,

June of 1895, as a one-page church bulletin, the Indianapolis RECORDER was born. The third oldest African-American owned and operated weekly newspaper has grown to a four-section, four-color, award winning newspaper and it will be celebrating its 100th anniversary throughout this year.

Since the inception of this premiere newspaper started with our community churches, we must "highlight" our centennial celebration within the church community.

"The Indianapolis Recorder Gospelfest Centennial Celebration" will be held on Sunday, November 12, 1995 at Eastern Star Baptist Church, 5750 East 30th Street in Indianapolis. This great service will start at 4:00 P.M., and your contribution is much needed to the success of our commemoration celebration. All proceeds will go towards the JAWS (Journalism and Writing Seminars) youth program, which was designed to teach area students about careers in journalism.

Farrakhan bold? Listen to aide Muhammad

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — After a long public silence, Minister Khallid Muhammad of the Nation of Islam told a church audience that he has returned as a "truth terrorist" for Black people. "I was born to give the white man hell and I will give him hell from the cradle to the grave," Muhammad told the crowd of about 100 at the Free for All Baptist Church.

Muhammad's visit to the Atlanta area Aug. 31 was his first public speaking appearance since Nation of Islam leader Minister Louis Farrakhan publicly rebuked him for a speech he gave in November 1993.

Muhammad was promoting the Nation of Islam's Million Man March, planned for Oct. 16 in Washington. The Atlanta-Journal Constitution reported in its Sept. 1 editions.

"You expect me to come back tiptoeing," he said. "... Expect me to come back with my foot stuck up your white behind."

He lashed out at key figures in O.J. Simpson's murder trial: victim Nicole Brown Simpson, Simpson's ex-wife, and Judge Lance Ito.

He called Simpson a "nasty blue-eyed woman" and Ito an "Uncle Tom Japanese who married an ugly white woman."

Muhammad captured the national spotlight last year when excerpts of a speech — in which he called Pope John Paul II a "cracker" and Jews "bloodsuckers" — were published in The New York Times.

Farrakhan criticized the speech, but Muhammad said he still serves Farrakhan despite the rebuke.

"I don't quite understand it, yet," Muhammad said. "I'm still hurt over it. But he's still my leader."

where they are supposed to go. We are a trusting people and are often taken advantage of without ever knowing it.

We love to embrace an old ideology to "Just leave 'em alone. The Lord'll get 'em." Well, it might be something for your little sticky-fingered church members to think about. I wouldn't want the Lord whippin' my fanny over a pan of rolls. No siree.

Besides, I learned a long time ago that "My arms are too short to box with God!"

all in the marketing. We're trying to market to the masses of people, not just to Black audiences or the saved and that's the advantage we have with the House of Blues. They've got the TV show, "Live from the House of Blues" and they're on 120 radio stations across the country."

The group released its first record in 1948. Since they've been with an untold number of labels, including Specialty, Philly International, Vee Jay Records and Elektra.

But don't bother to ask Fountain what album this makes. He has lost count. Somewhere in the range of 35-40 is about as close as he'll pin it down, with the biggest hit, "When I Lost My Mother, I Lost the Best Friend I Have Ever Had" in 1952. He doesn't know how many copies it sold.

"In them days," he recalls, "they didn't tell you. All I know is I got some money."

The group first got together at the Institute for the Deaf and the Blind in Talladega, Ala. The year was 1937 and a preteen Clarence Fountain was singing in the Glee Club when he and some friends — Johnny Fields, J.T. Hutton, Ollice Thomas, George Scott and Vel Bozman Taylor — formed the Happy Land Jubilee Singers. In 1945, they hit the gospel highway. There was already in existence The Five Blind Boys of Alabama in 1948.

A New Jersey promoter had hosted a battle of the Blind Boys and every night Fountain battled it out (in song) with the rival group's lead singer, Archie Brownlee. The crowds lapped it up while the groups racked it in.

"Now, with Archie passed on," Fountain says, "it's just us."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Tuskegee Airman Bowman dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Henry P. Bowman, one of the first Black U.S. combat pilots and a sportsman who broke the race barrier for referees in the Big Ten Conference, has died at 74.

Bowman, who retired as an Air Force captain in 1965 after 23 years of service, flew with the 99th and 332nd Fighter Squadrons in Italy and North Africa during World War II.

He was past president of the Tuskegee Airmen veterans group. Seldom told during the postwar years, the Black pilots' story was dramatized for a national audience this summer in an HBO movie "The Tuskegee Airmen."

Born in Des Moines, Iowa, Bowman grew up in Minneapolis and attended Macalaster College, excelling in football, basketball and baseball.

After the war, he became the first Black man to referee football and basketball in the Big Ten Athletic Conference.

He also worked with the old World Football League and appeared as a referee in movies "Two Minute Warning," "North Dallas Forty" and "Semi-Tough."

As national president of the veterans' group, Bowman organized scholarship campaigns to aid young people studying aerospace, aeronautics and science. He worked in human relations for the University of Illinois and the Hilton Corp. in Chicago and Los Angeles.

He died Sept. 23, friends and relatives said. Bowman is survived by his wife of 53 years, Caroline; three daughters, a brother, two sisters and several grandchildren.

Services were scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 30 at St. John's Episcopal Church in Los Angeles, with an Air Force 21-gun salute and flyover at a nearby park.

Commission to host cartless golf scramble

The Indianapolis Commission on African-American Males, in partnership with the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, will host a cartless golf scramble beginning at 8 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 14 at Douglass Golf Course, 2901 Dr. Andrew J. Brown Ave. African-American youth will be employed to caddie the event with all proceeds benefiting the Chamber and the Commission's annual Black College Tour. (A rain date is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 15.)

A barbecue lunch will be provided by the 38th Street Men's Club at noon, followed by an awards presentation at 1 p.m. Registration forms are located at all public golf courses. The deadline is Friday, Oct. 6.

For more information, contact either Lyman Rhodes at 327-5755 or Jesse Moore at 925-0533.

Inaugural Hoopfest Sept. 30

Lutheran Disability Ministries will stage its first Hoopfest, a five-on-five basketball tournament, Saturday, Sept. 30 in the Lawrence North High School gymnasium. The 16-team single-elimination tournament will feature representatives from Indianapolis area churches.

The tournament is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Hoopfest will also feature three-point and slam dunk competitions, a wheelchair game, food, carnival games and prizes.

Landon Turner, a member of Indiana University's 1981 National Championship team, is the honorary chairman for the event.

For more information, contact Jim Wood at 876-4717.

Boxing returns to Pepsi Coliseum

Fight Night Championship Boxing will return to the Indiana State Fairgrounds Event Center, Tuesday, Oct. 17 in the Pepsi Coliseum. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m. with boxing beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Fred Berns, Indiana's premiere boxing promoter, will bring to the ring two main events, including Marcus McIntyre of Indianapolis vs. Kenny Smith of New Orleans, vying for the International Boxing Council's American Heavyweight Championship Title. Terry "Sting" Ray of Terre Haute, Ind. vs. Robert "Chainsaw" Clevinger of Bristol, Tenn. will be the co-main event. Six preliminary fights will round out this night of entertaining action.

Other boxers from Indiana scheduled to fight include Lonnie Knowles of Indianapolis, Shannon Landberg of Lafayette and Mike Pollitt of New Lisbon.

Tickets are available at the Indiana State Fairgrounds Box Office and at selected TicketMaster locations.

Douglass Golf Course honors 'Smitty'

By ERIC MULLIN
Recorder Correspondent

A "Tiger" was honored Sept. 23 at Douglass Golf Course. Not Tiger Woods, but Indianapolis' own Alton "Smitty" Smith, who during the 1960s was called Tiger.

Even though the Ryder Cup Tournament was being televised, many golfers, young and old, came out to pay tribute to Smitty and participate in the Second Annual Douglass Open Golf Tournament.

Family and friends from as far as New York came to pay tribute to the 90-plus-year-old legend who was born in New Orleans and started playing golf when he was 11 years old.

Tribute was paid to Smitty by Tommy Vaughn, current pro at Brookshire Golf Course, who has known Smitty for more than 50 years. Vaughn remembers during the late '40s, when he was the pro at Pleasant Run Golf Course, how Smitty transformed Douglass from bare ground into a very good course to play.

Vaughn said Smitty was, and still is, a great guy and great golfer, today.

Mayor Stephen Goldsmith also paid tribute to Smitty for all he has done for the sport of golf in Indianapolis. He proclaimed Sept. 23, 1995 as Alton "Smitty" Smith Day.

Not only did Smitty receive a proclamation, he also received the Douglass Golf Course Award for living up to the mission of the course, which is bringing golf back to the community.

It was also said that Ted Rhoades, one of the greatest Black golfers to ever play the game, would not play Smitty at Douglass because he could not beat him there.

When Smitty is not playing golf, he can be seen teaching the fundamentals of the game to youth from the neighborhood. He is also known as one of the most admired and ageless sports figures in Indianapolis.

Smitty has taught all kinds of young golfers, which included Jack Ferguson and Bill Carr.

Charlie Sifford, who has overcome many barriers in the game of golf, has said that Smitty was one of the best golfers he has ever seen play the game.

To this day, Smitty still holds the course record with a 27 for nine holes of golf. He shot the record against Jerome Boyd when the two went out and shot nine holes. On their first endeavor, Boyd shot a 32 and Smitty shot a 36. The two of them went back out on the course and Boyd shot a 32 while Smitty shot a 27.

Smitty was characterized as a great guy, an excellent golfer and an all-around excellent person by the many people who came to pay homage to him.

Winners in the Douglass Open were, in the Championship Division 49 and under, Tim Bryant; Seniors 50-64, Fred Wilson, and Super Seniors 65 and older, Bill Mays.

Arlington Golden Knights win IPSAC title

By JIM NELSON
Staff Writer

After five weeks of the high school football season, a look at the undefeated teams in Marion County just might surprise you.

It's no surprise the Ben Davis Giants, a perennial powerhouse, are among the undefeated. Also undefeated are the defending state class 3A champion Roncalli Rebels, which also comes as no surprise.

The remaining undefeated teams in Marion County are the Decatur Central Hawks and the Arlington Golden Knights.

That's right, the Arlington Golden Knights.

The same Arlington Golden Knights team which won only one game during the two previous seasons and last year scored fewer points all season than starting quarterback Leroy Peterson has scored during the first five weeks.

Peterson is among the area's best this season with nine touchdowns and a couple of two-point conversions.

That Arlington Golden Knights team is undefeated.

Surprised?

You shouldn't be.

Members of the Arlington football program are confident their 5-0 start is a result of hard work and team unity. They are also convinced they will get better as the season continues.

A closer look at Arlington shows improvement primarily in three areas: team defense, the offensive and defensive lines and coaching.

"The big change was the change in offense," said Peterson, who Arlington Head Coach Dick Harpold describes as being better than most people think. "Last year, we had a bunch of different styles. Now, the linemen don't have to worry about all of the different styles. They just have to worry about who they have to get."

This Arlington team has won as many games in five weeks as the program has won during the last four years.

In 1991, Arlington was 0-9. In 1992, the Golden Knights were 4-5 and some of this year's senior class played on that 4-5 team, which lost its last five games. In 1993, Arlington was 0-9 and in 1994 the team was 1-8.

Harpold, in his first year at the school, has done one of the finest coaching jobs in the state while resurrecting the Golden Knights football program.

Arlington beat Arsenal Technical High School 20-12 two weeks ago to claim a share of the Indianapolis Public Schools Athletic Conference title. The Golden Knights won the title outright with a 26-6 victory over host Broad Ripple, Sept. 22.

"Tech came really ready to play," Harpold said. He admitted he was concerned how his team would handle being undefeated. "To win in a game that isn't your best speaks for itself."

A week later, his only concern was how nice it was to win the IPSAC title during his first year at Arlington, especially since he wasn't sure how good his team would be.

"They made believers out of me," Harpold said, after presenting the IPSAC championship trophy to senior linebacker and team captain Brian Dinkins. "That says a lot for the spirit of these kids. It says a lot about not giving up."

Dinkins, who was injured early in the game against Broad Ripple, told his teammates after the victory how special the team's accomplishment was.

"They're going to put your names in the book," Dinkins said. "You've worked hard and I'm proud of you."

Harpold, who has been a coach for 32 years, says this championship ranks among the best, especially since his team played what had to be its best game of the season to beat Broad Ripple.

"This is probably as sweet as any of them because you don't expect it," Harpold said, referring to how special winning the conference title was, considering few believed his team had a chance.

The game against Tech that gave Arlington a share of the IPSAC title was, at times, a hard-fought defensive battle surrounded by a few offensive explosions. But the biggest explosion was the interception by sophomore defensive back Donald Crumpton in the last minute of the game to seal the Arlington victory.

"I just caught it and thought about running," Crumpton said after returning the interception 63 yards for a touchdown.

Prior to the interception, senior defensive end Mark McClung blocked a pass attempt by Tech, which led to Crumpton's interception.

"I was just thinking stop the pass," McClung said.

For the second week in a row, junior Eric Martin has had to play sensationally on both sides of the ball to guarantee victory and the conference championship for the Knights, after Dinkins went down with an injury.

"I just knew I had to do the job," Martin said of replacing Dinkins during crucial moments of both games. "I knew I had to put it to them."

Southwestern Athletic Conference marks 75 years of excellence

By COLLIE J. NICHOLSON
Bayou Sports Syndication

History repeats itself annually in the Southwestern Athletic Conference and the 75th Anniversary season is no exception.

The SWAC has a long history of pride in heritage, breaking down barriers, establishing records and leaving a legacy of heroic proportions.

Since 1978, the year NCAA Division I-AA was established, the SWAC has been the national attendance leader, drawing 12,137,382 fans in 17 seasons with an outpouring of adoration in stadiums across the country, said Commissioner James Frank.

Last season, the league attracted 958,508 fans through turnstiles, 41,492 spectators short of the 1 million mark.

Not given to over-optimism, Frank expects another banner attendance year. There is ample justification for his view. Three weeks ago, 48,543 fans watched the Jackson State-Tennessee State contest and two weeks ago a crowd numbering 61,023 saw Hampton upset Grambling, 16-7.

The SWAC thinks big, the intensity runs high and the paranoia runs deep. Sub-sectional pride is always discernible and remains a continuing source of inspiration.

Aside from its unshakable commitment and tradition, the SWAC has other reasons for being brash and self-assured.

The league's stature is reflected in football lore as an incubator for some of the nation's best pro talent.

The legacy is unshakable. Success unprecedented.

Heading the exemplary pro talent list are Walter Payton of Jackson State, who parlayed crafty deception and quick moves into amazing runs with the Chicago Bears to become the career NFL rushing record holder with 16,726 yards, and Jerry Rice of Mississippi Valley State, still active and a star of almost mystic proportion with the San Francisco 49ers, who has already earned his place in pro history as the game's most prolific pass receiver.

Paul "Tank" Younger of Grambling, a pioneer from the late '40s and the first player from a Black college to earn all-pro honors on offense and defense, is equally lauded for the tremendous influence he exerted as a player and as an NFL administrator in a lengthy 45-year career.

The most recent SWAC luminary is Steve McNair, an extraordinary quarterback who conditioned Alcorn fans to expect championships while shattering numerous NCAA records. He ended his career with 14,496 yards passing (best ever in Division I-AA competition) and 16,823 yards in total offense (best in all divisions).

His exceptional ability prompted the Houston Oilers to sign him to a $28 million contract.

Add to this mix 500 SWAC players who cavorted as pros — and eight Hall of Fame stalwarts — and the importance of the conference is obvious.

The SWAC Pro Hall of Fame ledger includes Payton, Jackson State's will-o'-the-wisp; Deacon Jones, Mississippi Valley State; Lem Barney, Jackson State; Willie Davis, Grambling; Ken Houston, Prairie View and Willie Brown, Grambling.

Over the years, the SWAC inspired fearless, unhesitant and summary action to open countless doors.

Quarterback Doug Williams, out of Grambling, was the MVP in Super Bowl XXIII. Rice repeated as MVP in 1989.

The SWAC can also make a compelling argument that league coaches were among the best, men who had a profound effect on each other and were not satisfied with ordinary accomplishments.

Grambling's Eddie Robinson, the winningest college coach ever with 398 victories, plus coaches who maintained the same disciplined mental attitude — Arnett Mumford, Southern (333); John Merritt, Jackson State (332) and Fred Long, Wiley (227) — are four of only five stellar Black college mentors who won more than 200 games while practicing their craft with SWAC teams.

Other important SWAC facts and highlights:

■ The Prairie View Bowl, played in January annually from 1931-41, was the first postseason bowl game for minority schools.

■ The biggest SWAC games during the '30s and '40s pitted Wiley against Prairie View at the Texas State Fair and Southern against Wiley at the Louisiana State Fair.

■ In 1946, the Prairie View-Wiley game lured 46,000 fans into the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

■ Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball star who broke the major league color barrier, served as football coach at Sam Houston College, Austin, Texas — then a member of the league — in 1945 and 1946.

■ Southern University compiled the longest SWAC winning streak from 1947 to 1951. The Jaguars were unbeaten in 37 games. Two ties marred the streak.

■ The Jaguars also played and won the first postseason interracial game, beating San Francisco State at Kezar Stadium in San Francisco in 1948.

■ Dr. John Codwell was the first SWAC commissioner, circa 1950.

■ Dr. C.D. Henry, who later became assistant commissioner of the Big Ten, started the SWAC Statistical Service Bureau in 1953.

■ Fred Long of Wiley had the longest SWAC coaching tenure, spending his entire career, 45 years, in the league.

■ Buck Buchanan's all-around defensive efficiency made him the first selection overall in the 1962 pro draft. The Grambling ace was the top pick of the Kansas City Chiefs.

■ Jackson State holds the college record for having the most players selected in a single draft with 11 in 1968.

■ Grambling had 43 players in NFL training camps in 1971, a record for any college.

■ A peerless coach at Southern for 36 years, Arnett Mumford is the only SWAC coach to win a national Black college basketball crown along with six mythical football titles.

■ The nomadic Grambling Tigers have played football games in 28 of 50 states plus Washington, D.C., including 30 big-city stadiums. They also played two games in Tokyo, Japan.

■ The Bayou Classic, the annual Grambling-Southern showdown, is the nation's biggest minority football game. It pumps $34 million each year into New Orleans' economy and 70,000 fans into the Superdome.

■ The Alabama State-Alabama A&M game is not far behind, attracting 65,000 to Birmingham each fall for the big football weekend labeled the Magic City Classic.

■ Last fall, 63,512 SWAC fans filled Memorial Stadium in Jackson, Miss. for McNair's valedictory performance against Jackson State.

■ Alcorn State averaged 26,203 spectators in home games in 1994 to win the NCAA Division I-AA regular-season attendance title. Jackson State was second averaging 23,401 fans.

■ Willie Totten, a teammate of Jerry Rice at Mississippi Valley State, holds NCAA passing records for career touchdowns (139), season touchdown passes (56) and season yards per game (455.7).

■ Twelve members of the 22-man "All-Time Black College Football Team," selected by the Sheridan Broadcasting Network in 1993, played in the SWAC.

■ Alabama State joined the SWAC in 1982 and made noise at the national level by winning the league title and national Black college championship in 1991.

Whittington succeeds with attitude, community commitment

By JAMES M. KEOUGH JR.
Sports Writer

When the Indianapolis Colts square off against the undefeated St. Louis Rams Sunday in the RCA Dome, the starting defensive front will sport a different face.

Specifically, Bernard Whittington's.

He will occupy left defensive end and Trev Alberts will primarily watch from the sidelines.

Additionally, Tony Bennett will move over to right defensive end, in hopes of improving his ability to rush the passer.

After the Colts displayed an inability to consistently stop the run in the first three games — specifically around both ends — it was apparently time for a change.

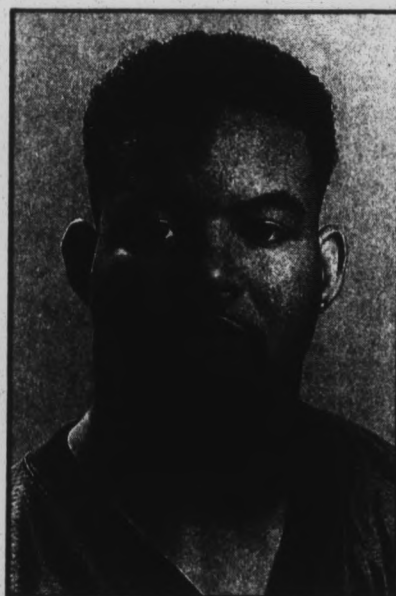

"Bennett is going to play primarily at right defensive end, Trev will bounce between both ends," said Colts Defensive Line Coach Greg Blache. "Last week, against Buffalo, we brought Trev off the bench and used him as a role player. I think Bernard will give me a big, strong guy on the left side, which is where most of the traffic is."

"Looking at the big picture, I want to get a couple of things done. To put a good defensive line together is kind of like the movie "Ben-Hur," it's putting chariot horses together. It doesn't mean putting the four fastest horses together or the four biggest. It's a balance. You need some guys who are solid against the run, some who can rush the pass."

Whittington, in his second year out of Indiana University, signed with the Colts as a free agent last year and was projected to be a long shot to earn a roster spot. His work ethic and dedication toward continuous improvement have helped enable him to not only make the team, but to become a consistent contributor.

Additionally, he is quickly developing into one of the better defensive players on the team. According to Blache, his success is primarily due to his team attitude, commitment, and willingness to accept the roles he has been asked to fill.

"He has done a phenomenal job," said Blache, who joined the Colts two seasons ago after working for the Green Bay Packers in the same capacity. "He has played well this entire year. In fairness to him, he should have been starting for me sooner. He has been my back-up tackle, my back-up end. But every game

Bernard Whittington

I have put him in, every situation I have thrown at him, he has handled it and responded.

"I'm as proud of him as I can be. He hasn't forgotten what has gotten him here. In being fair to the football team, I have been very unfair to Bernard on many occasions this season. My job is to focus on the big picture. He is my work horse. If I need a tackle, he is a tackle. If I need an end, he is an end. He hasn't had the opportunity to get in one position and flourish and blossom like a lot of guys do. But he has never uttered a word, he has never complained."

Whittington said lessons learned last season have prepared him for this season's challenges.

"Last year, I was thrown into the fire pretty quickly," said the St. Louis native. "At first, I kind of questioned my confidence, but then I started getting better. This year, when I reported to training camp, my confidence was there and I had gotten stronger. I had picked up about 20 pounds."

"I feel really good about myself and I am pretty confident. I want to do whatever I have to do to help the team win. This is a team effort. If one person goes down, in any position on the defensive line, then I can step in and play that position."

Whittington, an accomplished pianist, also maintains a strong presence in the community. He frequently meets with groups of children to discuss societal issues and performs at area venues.

The secret to Whittington's success on the football field is his success as a person, according to Blache. He described the 24-year-old as having an extremely strong character and a solid understanding of who he is and what is expected of him as a citizen in the community.

"I think that too many times people make it and then forget where they came from," said Whittington. "I try to give back to the children in this community by traveling around to schools, playing music and talking with children about issues in the community."

An update on JAWS interns

Julie Piatt: graduate, Indiana University Bloomington, 1994.

Recorder Intern 1991 until graduation.

Julie Piatt is currently employed at Resort Condominiums International of Indianapolis and works for the company's travel magazine as an editorial assistant. Piatt also served as an intern for the magazine and so impressed the staff with her skills that she beat out full-time employees at RCI for her current position.

She was one of two college students involved in the JAWS program who did not participate in the program as a high school student.

Thomas Major: graduate, The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, 1995; currently enrolled, Indiana University School of Law.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Thomas Major is a first year student at the Indiana University School of Law here in Indianapolis. Like Julie Piatt, Major did not participate in the program as a high school student, but began his Recorder experience after he began his collegiate career.

Tysha Hardy: graduate, Bradley University, Peoria, Ill., 1995.

Recorder Intern from 1989 to 1995.

Tysha Hardy began her association with The Indianapolis Recorder during her freshman year at Indianapolis Arsenal Technical High School. She was a winner of the prestigious McDonald's Black History Makers of Tomorrow award and was featured in national print and television advertising campaigns. She speaks Russian and has visited Russia several times during her college career. She also worked at several corporations as a public relations intern. Hardy started a program similar to JAWS at the Black radio station in Peoria. Her association with The Recorder was the foundation for the start of the JAWS program. During her high school career, Hardy served as the editor of her high school newspaper.

Immediately after graduating from Bradley University, Hardy joined the staff of The Indianapolis Recorder newspaper as the editor of the Entertainment News magazine, an arts and entertainment publication. As editor, Hardy determines the foundation and the direction of this new publication.

Kai Wright: senior, Emory University, Atlanta.

Recorder Intern since 1990.

A member of the original group of JAWS students and featured in a nationally published article in Quill Magazine, the official magazine of the Society of Professional Journalists, Kai Wright is currently finishing his studies in Atlanta.

Nicole Alexander: senior, Howard University, Washington, D.C.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Nicole Alexander is currently one of the four scholarship recipients at Howard University. She plans on starting her own magazine targeted at Black females upon graduation. During her senior year, she served as managing editor of her high school newspaper.

Kimberly Bradford: junior, Central State University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

Recorder Intern since 1990.

Kimberly Bradford plans on a career in broadcast journalism after graduation. She was very involved with the campus radio station at Central State University where, during her freshman year, she was one of the few undergraduates allowed to host a show. Currently, she is working in Indianapolis and is taking a break from her college studies. She has also served as an intern at WTLC-AM and FM stations, one of the top broadcast operations in the city of Indianapolis. During her senior year in high school, Bradford was the radio voice of Warren Central football and one of the few female play-by-play announcers in the country.

Michelle Evans: senior, Howard University, Washington D.C.

Recorder Intern since 1990.

Michelle Evans is original participant in the JAWS program and an honors graduate from Cathedral High School in Indianapolis. She was the first JAWS student to receive a four-year scholarship to Howard University and already has had numerous articles published in the school's award-winning newspaper. During her senior year, she served as editorial page editor for her high school newspaper. During the Summer of 1995, Evans served as an intern with The Indianapolis Star newspaper where her news stories and columns were featured throughout the paper.

A visit to the Indiana Pacers was highlighted by the chance to interview Pacer players and staff.

Elyria Kemp: senior, Bradley University, Peoria, Ill.

Recorder Intern since 1990.

Elyria Kemp has worked extensively with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and has completed internships in Washington D.C. and in Indianapolis. She has also published a book profiling the works of Black composers. Additionally she was salutatorian of her senior class at Broad Ripple High School. She will complete her studies at Bradley University in January.

Jerry Smartt: senior, DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Jerry Smartt is currently involved with the school newspaper and student publications at DePauw University. He holds the distinction of being the first Black valedictorian in the history of the Pike Township School District of Indianapolis. A pre-med student, he consistently has been an honor roll student since his arrival at DePauw. He also had several scholarship offers his senior year, including an offer to attend Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass.

Smartt is also a member of the DePauw University football team.

Lori Wilson: senior, Indiana University Bloomington.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Lori Wilson is a senior at Indiana University and has been involved with the campus newspaper. She plans on pursuing a career in broadcasting after graduation and was named the recipient of the Minority Journalism Scholarship from the Indianapolis Pro Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Nicole Woods: senior, Indiana State University, Terre Haute, Ind.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Nicole Woods has served in the public relations department of Golden Rule insurance since the summer after her freshman year and has maintained the position each summer until the summer of 1995. She also served as managing editor of her high school newspaper during her senior year, the first Black student to hold the position in the history of Pike High School. During the summer of 1995, Nicole Woods served as the lead intern for Indiana Black Expo where she was responsible for much of the public relations work involved in arranging this year's Indiana Black Expo Summer Celebration.

Tchad Blair: junior, Northwestern University, Chicago.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Tchad Blair is currently attending Northwestern University where he is combining courses in business and journalism. He is also a member of Northwestern University soccer team.

Shawn Cabbell: junior, Howard University, Washington, D.C.

Recorder Intern since 1992.

Shawn Cabbell is another Howard University scholarship recipient where he has been on the dean's list since enrolling. He is also working toward a degree in computer science.

Aubaine Woods: junior, Miami University of Ohio, Oxford, Ohio.

Recorder Intern since 1991.

Aubaine Woods initially won a four-year scholarship to Howard University. She has since transferred to Miami University of Ohio in Oxford, Ohio where she is continuing her studies. She also served as managing editor of the JAWS program during her senior year. As a JAWS intern, she distinguished herself with her outstanding coverage of health-related issues and their importance to teens. Her efforts were submitted by those organizations she wrote about to various area funding agencies as a way of generating revenue for those programs. She is currently a pre-med student at Miami of Ohio.

Several JAWS students have recently begun their college careers and were adjusting to college life at the time this report was written. Those students include:

Darnell Compton: freshman, Ball State University.

Recorder Intern since 1992.

Darnell Compton took over as the coordinator of the JAWS program during the summer of 1995. His participation as the program coordinator marks the first time a JAWS participant has been in charge of the program. Compton was also awarded an annual scholarship from the Indianapolis Press Club as a result of his outstanding academic standing and outstanding work as a member of the Ball State University student paper, The Daily News.

As coordinator of the JAWS program, he was responsible for 15 high school and college students and he coordinated the news content of the special JAWS section which appears in The Indianapolis Recorder newspaper.

Tiffany Boyer: sophomore, Indiana University Bloomington

Recorder Intern since 1993.

Marsha Deering: sophomore, Indiana State University.

Recorder Intern since 1992.

Dwayne Lane: sophomore, Central State University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

Recorder Intern since 1993.

Primerica entrepreneurs get boost from top players

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Applause, standing ovations and cheers engulfed the Marten House banquet room Sept. 15, during a session of the Primerica Financial Services Team Indiana Builders School.

Entrepreneurs of the financial services organization, and those interested in becoming a part of it, heard testimony from the best in the business.

"Our company is worldwide, including such countries as Canada and Puerto Rico," said Calvin O'Neal, senior vice president. "We are looking for people who want to work for themselves and control their own destiny."

Controlling one's own destiny is exactly what PFS entrepreneurs John Sanders, Johnny Dale and Darrell Johnson, among others, have done.

Sanders, national sales director from Jackson, Miss., earns a six-figure yearly income and is convinced that anyone can be as successful as he is in the business.

"I got started in this because I wanted unlimited income and the freedom that my former profession gave me," said Sanders, a former professional football player. "I was invited to a (PFS) meeting on how to manage money and it changed my whole life. It gave me an opportunity to own my own business and the freedom to work in the different ministries my wife and I are involved in."

Earning more than $50,000 in 1984, Sanders now enjoys an income exceeding $100,000. He boasts that he has never made less than $50,000 annually in the last 11 years.

When approaching people about being financially independent, he asks two questions: "Do you have access to enough cash to make your dreams come true?

Are you living out your childhood dreams?"

Think about it.

"If not," Sanders continued, "I recommend joining the exciting world of freedom through entrepreneurship. The only way to capture your dreams is by being in business for yourself because corporate America is not your friend."

Dale, who earns a five-figure income each year, is a former United Parcel Service truck driver.

He said he was making all the wrong financial decisions until his encounter with PFS.

"The only reason I joined the company was to make five (hundred), six hundred dollars extra a month," Dale said. "When I started out, I was working on Saturdays, then Sundays, too. My goal was to live a little better than I was. But, one night, I was driving my truck, half asleep, and hit several construction markers on the road. I knew then I wanted a change, and the rest is history."

"Successful PFS people come in all sizes and colors, but they all have two things in common: (the drive) to be successful and to win. And, they are not people without problems. They are people who know how to solve them. See you at the top."

Dale, who resides in Chicago, also said that maintaining a great attitude is crucial, but that is not the result of winning. Winning is the result of a great attitude.

Johnson, who also lives in Chicago, said his biggest fault was judging people by their outward appearance and that was because of his attitude at the time.

"I once misjudged a billionaire in this business because of the way he was dressed," Johnson admitted. "But, I learned that an outward look does not determine success. This company has changed my way of thinking, beginning with my attitude."

One of nine children, Johnson, who now earns a six-figure yearly income, told of how his mother raised him, his seven brothers and one sister on state assistance. But, as he put it, she gave him something "very special."

"She said I may not be able to send you to college, but I'm going to teach you two things and those are to have a winning attitude and to be forgiving," Johnson reflected.

Several PFS entrepreneurs were awarded for their efforts. Among them was Charlene Rhim, a regional manager, who spoke during the Saturday session.

"The beauty of this company is that we are all competitive, but we are friendly competitors who support one another," said Rhim. "I also want to commend those members who have been with us for a long time, but may not have been recognized during the sessions because they are an important part of the team."

She also told of how William Milton, regional vice president, holds his team together through adversity.

"All many people see are the final results, but what they don't see or know is how William holds us together when we are somewhat down in the trenches," Rhim continued. "His support and determination is admirable and we love him for that."

Business couldn't buy Cincinnati, some say

CINCINNATI (AP) — Opposition by Black voters, and the perception that Cincinnati's business community wanted to run the city, helped defeat a proposed strong-mayor form of government, activists said.

The proposal was defeated in an August special election by a 32,569-18,079 vote, according to unofficial final results from the Hamilton County Board of Elections.

The result means the city will keep its 70-year-old system, although supporters of a third system are gathering petitions to place their idea on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The Cincinnati Business Committee, a group of corporate executives which supported the proposal which was voted on, said nothing publicly after the vote. Ron Roberts, the committee's executive director, did not return a phone call.

But opponents said the election showed big business cannot buy the changes it wants, unless the changes are palatable to voters. Supporters spent $270,000 on the campaign.

"It is a mandate that the government is not going to be bought," said Daniel Radford, secretary-treasurer of the Cincinnati AFL-CIO Labor Council. "After the (November) election, we will all sit down, including the business community, and figure out what is good for the city."

The nine City Council seats are up for election Nov. 7. Organized labor, Democrats, Black Baptist ministers and the Charter Committee, Cincinnati's third political party, fought the ballot proposal, even though the business community spent three times more money.

Under the proposal, the mayor would have had executive powers to run city departments, hire and fire the city manager and veto council actions, but not introduce legislation. Six of the nine council members could have overridden a mayoral veto.

Opponents said it would have reduced the city manager's job too much, given the mayor too much power, and created fighting between the mayor and City Council.

The business community said the new system was needed to get things done in Cincinnati and end City Hall gridlock.

The proposal was rejected in 25 of Cincinnati's 26 voting wards. In the predominantly Black wards, where preachers urged their congregations to reject the proposal, the vote was 79 percent to 21 percent against.

"We got the message out," said the Rev. James Milton, pastor of the Southern Baptist Church in the city's Avondale section. He chaired a coalition formed to defeat the proposal. "I hope they've learned that whatever change is going to happen in this city, we're going to have to be a part of the planning."

Mayor Roxanne Qualls opposed the proposal and is gathering petition signatures for her rival proposal for the Nov. 7 ballot.

Qualls' proposal, like the business committee's, would double City Council terms to four years and provide for direct election of the mayor. The top vote-getter in the City Council election now becomes the mayor.

But Qualls' proposal differs because the mayor could introduce legislation, but could not hire or fire the city manager. The city manager would still answer to the nine council members, as now.

Ex-educators wonder what Supreme Court's on

BALTIMORE (AP) — Black students who wanted to become teachers 40 or 50 years ago did not go to the University of Maryland.

That's because the state, from the early 1930s until the mid 1950s, gave those students a free ride to out-of-state graduate schools, keeping them from attending the segregated University of Maryland. The students could, however, go to schools in other states where segregation wasn't the law.

And during that time, Maryland paid the tuition, travel and living expenses for many of them. The program changed from year to year and it's impossible to know how many people received the scholarships and how much money was spent, according to historians. The General Assembly doled the education money more generously in some years than others, said University of Maryland Historian George H. Callcott.

"It got increasingly funded in proportion to the fear of the courts ordering desegregation," Callcott said. "Maryland was purely and simply buying off the courts."

Students in the program studied at the University of Chicago, New York University, Columbia, Oberlin, Howard, Boston University and even as far away as the University of Hawaii.

Two of the city's past school superintendents, John Crew and Alice Pinderhughes, used the program, called simply "out-of-state scholarships." Wilbur G. Valentine, who went to New York University from program money, eventually served on the University of Maryland Board of Regents from 1977 to 1982.

These educators, now in their 70s and 80s, quickly became the Black school elite upon returning home. Many of them still live in Baltimore and recently watched as federal courts struck down the Benjamin Banneker Scholarship, a program for Blacks at the school that once excluded them.

Those who received the out-of-state scholarships called the state's measures to preserve segregation "stupid."

"The silliness of it all wasn't lost on us," said Dr. Rebecca Carroll, 76, who retired as a deputy city superintendent of city schools in 1981. She earned her master's degree at the University of Chicago. "We were pained and angered that we couldn't go to school in our own state, but we also knew this was something we could take advantage of."

Scholarships totalled $100,000 by 1949, and supported 400 students. But the Supreme Court decided a monumental desegregation case in 1954, and the program crumbled.

After the University of Maryland became integrated, the university began a scholarship program to recruit talented Blacks. In May, the Supreme Court agreed with a lower court's decision and said the Banneker program was discriminatory against non-Blacks.

On the Business Scene

Banc One Mortgage Corporation recently announced the promotions of Les Kimball to executive vice president and division manager, and Kim Greaves to senior vice president and servicing manager of the Loan Administration Division.

Diane Abbott, the first Black

woman elected to the British Parliament in 1987, will be a panelist in the National Black MBA Association's Executive Plenary Session, during the organization's annual conference being held through Sunday, Oct. 1 in Boston.

U.S. Army Col. Steve Lancaster was selected as the new administrator of the Indiana Court of Appeals. He is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame and Indiana University School of Law. His retirement from the Army, after 28 years of active duty, is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 30.

Joe Williams joined Quik Printing & Copy Centers as sales executive for four Indianapolis locations.

James Limp, formerly administrator of Eli Lilly & Co., is the newly-elected chairman of the Service Corps of Retired Executives, for the coming year.

"Having a good doctor truly can be the difference between life and death."

"Sometimes, my Methodist doctor just calls to find out how I am. Doctors don't usually do that."

"I'm confident that, if they work with Methodist, they must really be good."

"They keep you healthy so you don't wind up in the hospital."

"All the Methodist doctors work as a team."

It's Easy To Find A Doctor You Trust In Your Neighborhood.

You've been hearing a lot of talk about health care lately. But the most important thing still is having a doctor you trust.

That's why today, more people are turning to the doctors of the Methodist Medical Group, one of the largest networks of primary care physicians in central Indiana. You're sure to find a doctor that's close to you. Methodist Medical Group doctors provide personalized care and a team approach to health care, giving you access to leading specialists at Methodist Hospital and Methodist's Outpatient Campuses, conveniently located all around Indianapolis. There's no more trusted name in health care in central Indiana.

So be sure you pick a health plan that lets you choose one of the Methodist Medical Group doctors listed here. Or call us at 929.2222. Let's talk about finding a caring, convenient Methodist doctor in your neighborhood.

Want $24,500 for college?

The Army Reserve can help you take a big bite out of college expenses.

How?

If you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill could provide you with up to $6,920 for college or approved vo/tech training.

We'll also pay you over $105 a weekend to start. Training is usually one weekend a month plus two weeks' Annual Training. By adding the pay for Basic Training and skill training, you'll earn over $17,585 during a standard enlistment.

So, if you could use a little financial help getting through school—the kind that won't interfere with school—stop by or call:
